I'M AN ADDICT—ACCUSED

Escaping Charges Laid After Chase

CAIN

COLEBERT

Daniel Bradley Cain, a 19-year-old self-confessed heroin addict, was remanded in custody to Thursday when he appeared in Victoria provincial court this morning on a two-count Colwood RCMP charge of unlawful escape from William Head prison March 22 and being unlawfully at large.

Crown prosecutor Clarence Vause said further charges will be laid at that time.

Cain, who elected trial by magistrate on both counts, said he would seek legal advice before pleading.

Appearing pale and nervous in the packed courtroom, and frequently fidgeting as he stood in the witness box, Cain asked to see a doctor.

Judge Harold Alder asked him what the problem was and he replied: "I'm a heroin addict."

The court appearance was the sequel to a day of high drama, anxiety and confusion on Tuesday, when a young man identified by police as a William Head escaper became the fugitive in a seven-hour man hunt which included a high-speed car chase, exchange of gunfire, barricaded defiance in a Fairfield-area home, abduction of hostages and, finally, capture. (See story, pictures on Page 13).

Key figures in the scenario were a young mother, Mrs. Diana Smith, of 1116 Leonard, and her three-year-old daughter Emily, who for more than two and a half hours were the hostages of the armed man — first in their home and then on a car ride in which the suspect managed to give his pursuers the slip.

An alert off-duty policeman, Oak Bay Constable Robert Faith, was the catalyst in the chain of events that started at about 10 a.m.

Shopping in Gordon's Sporting Goods, 1030 Hillside, Faith saw a youth matching Cain's description buying a box of shotgun shells. He followed him, saw him enter a parked car and noted the licence number which he telephoned to Victoria police headquarters.

A little less than an hour later, city Constables Peter Talavs and Rick Mitchell saw the car heading south on Douglas near Bay.

The high-speed chase that ensued took in Caledonia, Quadra, Balmoral and Cook. Near the Cook-Oxford intersection the driver of the pursued car turned and pointed what appeared to be a hand-gun at the police cruiser.

At Cook and May the fleeing vehicle collided with a car driven by Andrew Modos, 152 Cambridge, who was slightly injured, before it struck a tree and then a telephone pole.

Cabbie Bailed Out

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The taxi dispatcher radioed cabbie Ron Colebert there was a fare for him at 703 Esquimalt Rd. — and Colebert drove innocently into the final act of Monday's drama-packed police manhunt.

The fare proved to be a young man with longish hair who came out of the apartment block and got into the front seat of the cab.

He wanted to go to Alderman Road, about half a mile away, but he also wanted to tell Colebert how to get there, instructing him to turn this way and then that.

"I said, 'make up your mind where you want to go,' " the taxi driver recalled later.

Colebert said he knew there was a police manhunt on but he didn't connect his passenger with the search.

It was 4:30 p.m. and a police helicopter was still swinging low over Esquimalt and Victoria West streets, in radio contact with the dozen or so police cars, marked and unmarked, scattered through the area.

The police were looking for a robber suspect they identified as Daniel Bradley Cain, 19.

Meanwhile, Robert Morgan, 46, a Victoria West resident, had been following the case all day on his police band radio. He was driving the area with his son, Dale, 17, "just keeping an eye open."

They spotted a cab driving slowly towards Craigflower and as they passed it and saw the passeger, Morgan told his son:

"That's the guy."

They turned and followed a block behind and then Morgan spotted an unmarked police car coming up from behind. He pulled over and let the car draw even, honked it to a halt and told a detective: "Get on that cab, that's the guy."

Unknown to Colebert and his passenger, the officers had been paying particular attention to taxi cabs. Their suspect was thought to be on foot after he had fled from a car he had stolen, abandoning a mother and baby daughter he had taken hostage five hours earlier.

Driving down Raynor, Colebert's passenger suddenly said there were police ahead.

"Where? I don't see any," Colebert replied.

But the cabbie did see the pistol his passenger then produced. And the passenger told him to drive around the police ahead.

It was now 4:40 p.m. at the intersection of Raynor and Craigflower. And the police weren't just ahead. They were behind in cars and converging

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 4,000 civic workers in Vancouver, Richmond, Delta, Burnaby, New Westminster and North Vancouver city and district failed to show up for the start of their shifts today.

Instead they went out to the street corners in their municipalities to hand out pamphlets giving their side of their labor disputes with the municipalities.

Tax Cut Likely In Turner Budget

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner Tuesday promised a new budget at the earliest possible date to cope with the most serious economic problems Canada has faced in 15 years.

Turner indicated the budget will be brought down before the end of May, and observers automatically assumed it will contain tax reductions to stimulate consumer spending.

Key factors that will shape the budget contents were described by Turner as:

—U.S. tax and energy policy.

—Any agreement arising from the federal-provincial conference on oil and gas prices.

—The possible effect the government will have on prices and incomes, through its consensus program; and —A further assessment of the international situation.

It is two months since Turner touched off speculation on a new budget by admitting that the recession in the U.S. and Canada, and in some other countries, was having a deeper effect on the Canadian economy than had been anticipated at the time of the November budget.

Since then unemployment has worsened, statistics have shown that economic growth in Canada is in decline, and Canada's inflation has continued to run at the double-digit level while U.S. price increases have tapered off.

Perhaps the final straw in Turner's decision-making came yesterday when Statistics Canada reported that unemployment had increased in March to a seasonally adjusted rate of 7.2 per cent, up .5 from the previous month.

When he brought down his November budget Turner forecast a growth rate of about four per cent, in real

CUPE Hits Lum Charge

Saanich employees' union today denied responsibility for jamming sewers as charged Tuesday by Mayor Ed Lum.

"I deny it is being done by CUPE members," said Jim Brett, president of Local 374, Canadian Union of Public Employees. "I deny all charges by Mayor Lum."

Brett offered an explanation for the incidents, which have caused sewage backups and damage to homes in the Gordon Head area, but Lum said the reasoning was unsatisfactory.

According to one of the members of Local 374, whose normal work is in sewers, a former contractor employed by Saanich made a practice of putting chicken wire cages in sewer lines to catch foreign material during construction to prevent it from plugging the system.

Some of these, left in the pipes, could break loose and be carried downstream to lodge in strategic points, with the result that blockage could back up sewage into homes, Brett said.

But Lum pointed out the traps or cages have the appearance of being jammed into pipes with large rocks or sacks of stones on either side. One rock was nearly the size of the pipe itself, he said.

The mayor acknowledged the wire traps could have

IDI FOR QUEEN?

KAMPALA (UPI) — President Idi Amin today offered himself as head of the British commonwealth in place of Queen Elizabeth because of what he called Britain's economic collapse.

Uganda Radio quoted Amin as saying, "The British Empire doesn't exist, and the British economy has collapsed which has made Britain unable to maintain its position as leader of the Commonwealth.

"I offer myself to be appointed head of the commonwealth in view of the success of my own economic revolution in Uganda."

The offer to succeed the queen was made in a telegram to commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith. Amin said that he would not attend the forthcoming commonwealth prime ministers conference in Jamaica but offered to host the 1977 meeting.

The commonwealth secretariat in London said it had received the telegram.

NEWS BRIEFS

Deeper Recession?

WASHINGTON (WP) — Former U.S. federal reserve board governor Andrew F. Brimmer Tuesday predicted that the recession would deepen beyond administration expectations, and called on the federal reserve to push the nation's banks into a more liberal lending policy.

Brimmer said that the deteriorating economic situation would result in average rate of unemployment at 9.3 per cent this year, 8.9 per cent in 1976, and 7.3 per cent in 1977. (The March unemployment level was 8.7 per cent.)

Portugal Bars U.S.

LISBON (UPI) — Portugal's leftwing government has barred the United States from using an American base in the Azores Islands to supply Israel during any new Middle East war. But Prime Minister Vasco Goncalves has promised to honor all of Portugal's past commitments to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

8 Leftists Hanged

SEOUL (UPI) — The South Korean government hanged eight leftists today on charges of orgainizing student demonstrations to overthrow President Park Chung-Hee. The justice ministry said the condemned men — alleged members of a leftist organization called the People's Revolution Party — were hanged this mornjng at Seoul Prison. Six officials witnessed the executions.

Oil Transfer Talks

NO HARBOR RUSH

A year ago today the three-acre Reid Centre site on wharf street was frozen by cabinet order-in-council, and the following month it was purchased by the provincial government.

Last week the province added nearly nine more acres to its Inner Harbor land holdings — and became the major owner of prime waterfront in the capital — when it acquired the Marathon Realty property below Belleville Street.

As Times City all reporter Paul Moss notes in a Page 5 article today, the year separating these two events has been one of little or no visible progress, in terms of planning the harbor's future.

But that's a misleading impression, according to Resources Minister Robert Williams, who has apparently emerged as the No. 1 man in shaping our waterfront destiny.

Williams said Tuesday much preliminary technical work, including market research, has taken place since July last year, when the government's Inner Harbor consultant Rod Clack handed in his report following a well-attended public hearing.

A considerable amount of design work has also been undertaken by the government and by noted architect Arthur Erickson, the minister said.

"It's not something we want to rush into," he added. "A lot has been done in the background even if it doesn't look like it."

Williams said John Webster, who has been working in the lands department since the beginning of this year, was hired from Marathon Realty to co-ordinate all planning and development activities for the government's Inner Harbor holdings.

Asked if any legislation was in the offing with regard to harbor protection and development — as he indicated last summer — he replied that was more appropriately a matter for "other departments."

The minister wouldn't be more specific. "I don't know where it (legislation) stands in government priorities right now," he said. "It has been considered."

Posties Mull $68 Offer

OTTAWA (CP) — Letter Carriers' Union president Roger Decarie said today union leaders are still studying a conciliation report that proposes weekly raises to letter carriers totalling $68 over two years and, for now, have no intention of calling a strike.

The report was given last Monday to the union and government negotiators, but was not released until today. Should the union reject its proposals, a strike is legally possible April 14.

Pay raises proposed in the report, which was supported by the union nominee to the three-man conciliation board, would raise the weekly pay to letter carriers with three years' experience to $245.60 by July 1, 1976, from the current $177.60.

The conciliation report proposes a pay raise retroactive to Jan. 1 of 70 cents an hour; another 30 cents on July 1; a further 40 cents next Jan. 1 and a final increase of 30 cents on July 1, 1976. Letter carriers with three years' experience now get $4.44 hourly.

Total pay increases would be 38 per cent over two years, of which 15¾ per cent is immediately effective and dates back to Jan. 1.

PM, Premiers Join Battle On Future Energy Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — Eastern premiers opposed to higher oil and gas prices dug in their heels in determined style today as Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial leaders joined battle over future pricing policies at a national conference on energy and the economy.

If anything, attitudes appeared even tougher than advance publicity had indicated as Ontario Premier William Davis shifted his stand to opposing "any" increase from earlier resistance to a "substantial" increase.

"We will not support an increase at this time," he said, in determined tones. There was no applause from Trudeau and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed who both favor increases in the price of oil and gas, nor from Saskatchewan, which wants oil prices to rise higher than the current $6.50 a barrel.

Within a few minutes of the Davis statement, the Ontario premier was getting the kind of support he wanted from both premiers Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia, and more moderately, Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick, both opposed to any higher prices.

"We are not prepared to support further rip-offs by producing provinces and the government of Canada," Regan said to beaming approval by Premier Davis and a wry smile by Premier Lougheed.

Lougheed said the most important question facing the conference is the adequacy of a long-term energy supply for Canada and the prices necessary to achieve that goal.

In an opening statement Lougheed noted that Alberta had warned last year that unless incentives for oil exploration and development were improved there was a serious danger of a future shortage of oil.

The Alberta premier said the danger was dramatically confirmed in a National Energy Board report last November which indicated that starting in 1975 Canada's declining productive capacity would no longer be sufficient to supply it's total oil requirements.

The prospects of a future shortage in natural gas were also increasingly evident, he said.

B.C.'s Premier Dave Barrett suggested today the price for natural gas exported to the United States should double to $2 a thousand cubic feet by Nov. 1.

Reiterating his complaints that Canadian gas is underpriced in the U.S. market, the premier proposed three increases in the price from the current $1 level.

It should go to $1.40 a thousand cubic feet May 1, $1.60 on Aug. 1 and to $2 by Nov. 1, the premier told the meeting.

If approved, the increase would add $1 billion to the annual gas bill for the United States, which now imports about one trillion cubic feet of gas from Canada each year.

Premier Barrett said American producers already are selling intra-state gas, supplies produced and consumed within the borders of a single state — for between $1.50 and $2 for 1,000 cubic feet.

"British Columbia should be charging a minimum of $2 for its gas," the premier said.

Prime Minister Trudeau called for restraint by business and labor to fight inflation but said the price of oil and natural gas should go up.

He steered clear of saying exactly how much the federal government believes should be added to the frozen price of petroleum products.

Much of his speech dealt with the economy and the federal government's efforts to reach a consensus with industry and labor on how best to battle the problems of inflation.

Political Row Flares at Oscar Show

Times News Services

LOS ANGELES — The Academy awards Tuesday night were again used as a platform for a political statement. Burt Schneider, co-producer of the winning feature documentary, Hearts and Minds, a film about the Vietnam war, read a telegram he said was from the chief Viet Cong representative in Paris, Dinh Da Thi.

Schneider said the telegram offered "greetings of friendship to all the American people" and asked him to "transmit to all our friends in America our recognition of all that they have done on behalf of peace . . ."

Later in the show master of ceremonies Frank Sinatra said he had been asked to make a statement on behalf of the Motion Picture Academy, saying: "We are not responsible for any political statements made on this program, and we're sorry they had to take place this evening."

Master of ceremonies Bob Hope said he received five telegrams from television viewers upset by Schneider's remarks.

Hope then approached Sinatra, read the disclaimer.

With the agreement of Academy director Walter Mirisch, Hope scrawled out a message on the back of one of his telegrams reading: "We are not responsible for any political references on this program and we are sorry they had to take place this evening."

Winners of the Victoria Times - CJVI 900 "Visit to the Hollywood Stars" contest will be announced in tomorrow's Times. For list of awards see Page 3.

Hope said that when Sinatra balked at reading the message in the name of the Academy, he told him:: "If you don't read it, I will."

Sinatra then agreed to do it. but Sinatra's action brought an angry riposte from Shirley MacLaine, the only woman master of ceremonies.

She said she told Sinatra: "Why did you do that? You said you are speaking on behalf of the Academy, and I'm a member of the Academy."

Asked if she agreed with Schneider reading the telegram, Miss MacLaine said: "It seemed like a very positive, friendly telegram to me."

Miss MacLaine's brother, Warren Beatty, who had just presented the best movie award, also chided Sinatra, calling him: "You old Republican, you."

Participants said the incident climaxed with Miss MacLaine and Sintra still angry with each other as they were supposed to go into a song and dance number, That's Entertainment, with Hope and Sammy Davis to end the show.

Sinatra had to be dragged into the number by Davis tugging at his coat sleeve, they said.

Two Escaping Charges Laid Following Chase

found a gun, the suspect then ran east on May.

As he fled he loosed one shot toward the two police officers, and Mitchell fired one shot in return — apparently the only exchange of gunfire in the entire drama.

After the fugitive vanished in the area of quiet residential streets, policemen who had been rushed to the scene began a house-to-house search, while others set up observation posts at key intersections.

In a later summary of the day's events, Staff Sgt. Angus Stewart, acting head of the Victoria police detective division, said the young man had kicked in the back door of an apartment at 1116 Leonard, home of provincial civil servant Robert Smith (who was at work at the time), his wife Diane and three-year-old daughter Emily.

When police checked the premises there was a long delay before Mrs. Smith answered and when she did, she was obviously nervous. The officers asked if she was in danger and she replied: "Yes, he's holding my baby upstairs and he has a gun."

Police attempts to bargain with man, partly by telephone and partly in telephone conversation, failed. He demanded that they clear the area and told officers he was taking the woman and child as hostages in her car.

Stewart described the suspect as "screaming and shouting" and quoted him as saying: "If you come anywhere near me I'll shoot them both and myself."

While the man's request was being cleared with senior officers he smashed some windows in the Smith apartment and at noon, about half an hour after the two officers had first knocked on the apartment door, he emerged from the building with Mrs. Smith and Emily.

All three were wrapped in a large blanket, the abductor wearing a wide-brimmed hat. As the gunman drove away in the Smiths' car the girl was on his lap and her mother alongside in the front seat.

Police vehicles followed as the getaway car threaded a meandering route. They did so "discreetly" to avert any retaliation against the hostages, said Stewart.

They lost sight of the car near Belmont and Myrtle, about 20 minutes after the escaper had commandeered the Smith car.

Several false reports were checked out during the next hour before the next tension-easing development—a reassuring telephone call from Mrs. Smith at 1:30 p.m. announcing that she and her daughter were safe.

She informed police that the runaway man had stopped the car in an alley at the rear of 600 Wilson, released them and fled on foot.

But more than three hours of searching and following up suspicious sightings lay ahead. The search centred in Victoria West and Esquimalt, with police from the city, Esquimalt, Oak Bay, Saanich and RCMP all co-operating in what city Police Chief John Gregory later termed "a real community effort."

The city chartered a helicopter from Vancouver Island Helicopters Ltd., an RCMP helicopter arrived later from up-Island and a tracking dog was also used in the hunt.

After fruitless searching throughout the afternoon, the end of the manhunt came swiftly about 4:30 p.m.

Police had been checking passengers in taxis all afternoon and they converged on a cab driven by Ron Colebert, 62, who had a young male passenger, as the taxi approached Craigflower on Raynor.

Officers recognized the suspect as Colebert braked to a halt near a police roadblock and ducked behind his cab. Police armed with shotguns surrounded the car and its occupant was arrested without resistance.

from other points because Colebert's passenger had been recognized.

Colebert took just seconds to decide what to do.

"I figured I couldn't just sit there and I was taking a chance one way or the other."

He braked his taxi to a stop, jumped out and ran behind it.

"I took off for the back of the car — hoping I'd get there."

He did.

Policemen with shotguns sprinted for the abandoned taxi.

Around Greater Victoria, in police cars, radio rooms at police stations, newsroom, wherever there were receivers monitoring the police radio band, two harsh excited words boomed out over the air ". . . stop . . . police!"

LUM CHARGES DENIED

been used by the contractor, but that would not explain the placement of rocks. Besides, he said, the contractor worked in the Braefoot area, and plugs are being found "all over the Gordon Head area."

The contractor was reported to have gone out of business and could not be traced immediately.

Lum said if Brett's explanation were the case, the traps would have shown up before this. Furthermore, sewer manholes show evidence of being lifted recently.

Finally, the mayor said, he had spoken to CUPE members personally and had been told the act of sabotage had been discussed informally between some members of the union, and some of these had refused to go along with the idea.

Brett said Lum was using the incidents to arouse taxpayers. "We're getting pretty used to this stuff of being blamed for things. Anything that happens in the municipality we get blamed for."

Lum said he was waiting, meanwhile, for a reply from Brett regarding the possibilty of reverting to direct negotiations with the local, which is being explored by all four core municipalities who have been acting up to now as one united body.

Brett agreed with comments made earlier by CUPE representative Tom Smith, who suggested the municipalities are trying to play off one union local settlement against the others.

"I still think they're playing games and trying to play one local against the other," Brett said.

The obstacle in regional bargaining, which has failed mediation efforts, has been the setting of an acceptable wage rate for outside staff, and employers are now waiting for one local to set a proposal on paper "to be used against the other" jurisdictions, Brett said.

Lum responded to this, too, disagreeing with the view that local bargaining could be used as a lever.

TURNER BUDGET

terms, for the Canadian economy.

In February, he said that target had been shaded down due to various factors. Yesterday he declined to say what his new projection is but he promised an assessment when he brings down the new budget.

The new budget might contain guidelines for price and incomes restraint. "I will have to deal with the consensus in one form or another in the budget statement," Turner said in response to a question from opposition leader Robert Stanfield.

He added that a progress report on the government's consensus-seeking efforts would be made to the federal-provincial conference tomorrow (Thursday).

Turner hinted that it will be an expansionary budget when he told Sinclair Stevens (PC—York Simcoe) that the budget will obviously have to deal with the problems of rising unemployment, declining productivity and increasing losses resulting from industrial disputes.

NDP Parliamentary leader Ed Broadbent noted that unemployment, in percentage terms, is higher than the levels attained even during the government's 1969-71 deflationary program.

He asked for details of programs to initiate action that would lead to more jobs in the economy.

Turner replied that he would have to wait for the budget.

The finance minister said the budget will be brought down as soon as he has had an opportunity to assess key economic factors with more precision than has been possible to date.

He added that on his trip to the Middle East he would be calling on the U.K. chancellor of the exchequer and the minister of finance of France to obtain further information on their assessment of world economic conditions.

the weather

Increasing amounts of cloud were being reported over southeastern B.C. early this morning while other regions were mainly clear. About four inches of snow fell at Cranbrook overnight. The cloud and precipitation were caused by a large but weak low pressure centre in the northern U.S. plains. The surge of moisture in the easterly flow across the southern Rockies will diminish tonight. However some cloud and snow or rain will persist in the Kootenays through Thursday. Sunny skies are forecast for most of the remaining regions of the province today and Thursday. A weakening disturbance approaching the Queen Charlottes is expected to affect only the northernmost sections of the north coast Thursday.

54% Hike For Ney

NANAIMO — Mayor Frank Ney's salary will be boosted by 54 per cent as part of salary increases Nanaimo city council voted itself this week.

Ney will receive $11,600 basic salary compared to last year's $5,280, with $5,800 for expenses compared to $2,640 in 1974 before amalgamation.

Aldermen will get increases of 37 per cent for salary and expense accounts combined. They totalled $3,960 last year and will go to $6,300.

Oscar Night 1975: It Became A Family Affair

Times News Services

LOS ANGELES — The Oscar presentations Tuesday night became a family affair, with the Mafia movie Godfather Part 11 taking seven awards including best picture.

It was a night of triumph for Francis Ford Coppola, who won an oscar himself as best director for Godfather II and shared the oscar for writing the film with Mario Puzo, author of the best-selling novel that began it all.

Coppola saw his own family do as well as his powerful fictitious mobsters, with his father Carmine Coppola taking an oscar for the movie's score, a rare and possibly unprecedented father-son victory.

Ellen Burstyn won a close contest for the best actress oscar and television comedian Art Carney climaxed a night of surprises by taking the oscar for best actor as a result of his first-ever starring role in a motion picture.

The best supporting actor and actress awards went to a traditional favorite, Ingrid Bergman, and a newcomer, Robert de Niro, for his portrayal of a younger version of Marlon Brando's Don Vito Corleone in Godfather II.

Miss Burstyn won the best actress award for her performance as a housewife turned down-and-out singer in Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore.

She had been nominated, but lost, last year for The Exorcist and in 1971 for her supporting performance in The Last Picture Show.

A jubilant Carney, who danced a little jig on his way to the stage to collect his statue, won the best actor award playing a gallant old man on a cross-country trek with his cat in Harry and Tonto.

Carney, Jackie Gleason's former television comedy foil, said he was grateful to his agent, who advised him, when he had doubts about a dramatic role sharing top billing with a cat. "Do it you are old."

"I'm 56 years old and I'm still a kid," Carney said. "I've still got stars in my eyes."

Amarcord, Frederico Fellini's affectionate autobiographical film of pre-war Italy, was named best foreign language film of the year.

Best song went to We May Never Love Like This Again, from The Towering Inferno.

The disaster film also won for cinematography and editing.

Award for best originaf screenplay went to Chinatown.

Union Clause Said Waste

KAMLOOPS (CP) — R. H. Laidlaw, publisher of Kamloops Sentinel, said Monday inclusion of a reproduction clause in a contract with the International Typographical Union would result in wasteful featherbedding.

Laidlaw said in a letter Monday to 65 employees of the paper the union has insisted on the clause which would require the five papers owned by Thomson B.C. Newspapers Ltd. to reproduce locally any material which advertisers supply ready for publication.

The Canadian Press erroneoudsly reported Monday that the Vancouver Printing Pressmen's Union had insisted on the reproduction

No Constitutional Crisis

Remember the first federal-provincial energy conference a year ago? It convened amid crisis — the Arabs' stiff price hikes and selective boycott generated a tremendous psychological uneasiness in the west. British Columbians had been warned a few months before about a shortfall in natural gas production that could have seen B.C. industry forced to curtail operations or shut down entirely during the winter.

There were worries about sufficient heating oil in eastern Canada. Ottawa scurried to buy up supplies wherever it could. One deal saw the federal government pay an extraordinary 99 cents a gallon for Romanian fuel oil.

Confident in the word of the oil companies that Canada had reserves enough to last for years, Canadians woke one morning, it seemed, to learn instead from the same oil companies that really our reserves were quite skimpy, and unless the companies got a lot more money for exploration we'd soon be back, literally, to burning wood and coal.

Well, we sat glued to the television last time around watching our provincial and federal leaders "solve" Canada's energy crisis. The solution turned out to be a higher price for Alberta and Saskatchewan oil, and a tax on exports of same to the U.S. to subsidize Quebec and the maritime provinces who use more expensive imported oil.

As usually happens in a country of 11 sovereign governments and at least that many points of view, a muddled compromise was reached which seems to have worked well enough since.

So excuse us if we stifle a yawn at claims that the current energy confab in Ottawa is any kind of crisis of Confederation, or constitutional flash-point. A crisis implies some kind of struggle between opposing groups. Traditionally, the struggle has involved conflicts between successive federal and provincial governments over the right to authority in a certain jurisdiction. The arguments began almost as soon as the ink on the BNA Act was dry, and the shouting hasn't stopped yet.

But in the current energy contretemps, the western provinces seem to have given up the fight without a shot. The time for a battle on constitutional grounds was almost a year ago when Finance Minister John Turner brought in his controversial budget which disallowed provincial royalties paid by oil and gas producers as deductions from federal taxes.

But the provinces couldn't or wouldn't get together. They still can't. Premier Dave Barrett has gone down to Ottawa this time round with a single-minded determination to extract a much higher natural gas export price. Saskatchewan premier Allan Blakeney proposed a pooled energy exploration fund. His province would forgo higher oil prices if the money went into this fund instead.

Manitoba premier Ed Schreyer has gone to the meeting boosting what look like wage and price controls and a kind of income re-distribution. Alberta premier Peter Lougheed seems to favor a $3 a barrel oil price increase, and oddly enough finds support from Quebec's Robert Bourassa, while Ontario premier William Davis talks tough about resisting any price rise.

Prime Minister Trudeau just smiles and smiles. No matter what decision comes out of the meeting, or even if a decision is deferred until a second meeting in May, the federal government will be the only winner, with its central authority much strengthened.

"... you blundering idiot ... I'm CIA myself ...!!"

Footnote on Vanishing Land

In the Columbia Valley near Cultus Lake, Department of National Defence agents are seeking options on and threatening expropriation of 700 acres of farmland to expand the Canadian Forces Base at Chilliwack. It's a mere footnote to an ongoing process that is eating up most of the arable land in British Columbia. The long overdue provincial government land freeze has slowed development on farmland but the growth syndrome seems to have a life of its own.

On the Saanich peninsula and in the Fraser Valley rural farmland continues to be replaced by housing. But when an apparently insensitive federal government gobbles up scarce farmland for a military training ground it is time to ask questions. Is the acquisition of 700 acres hard by a recreational area necessary? The Canadian armed forces are being reduced in numbers, at the same time they acquire more land. And what of the people who live on this land? Many of them have lived in the Columbia Valley for four or five generations. Why should they be forced to vacate for the military in peacetime?

More than 200 area residents are reported to have signed a petition against base expansion. But a Chilliwack armed forces spokesman says the government has $1.8 million to spend and requires a minimum of 700 acres. From Ottawa's point of view, it is cut and dried. Oust the farmers and pay them off. Yet generations of families have sowed the fields in the shadow of the Cascade Mountains. Not only do they own the land, their emotional roots are deep in the valley. With $1.8 million jingling in its fatigues the DND should look elsewhere for land, where it won't disturb people or rich soil. If the armed forces occupy a low government priority, common sense would seem to be even further down the list.

JAMES RESTON

Boo to Doom and Gloomsters

WASHINGTON — You can hardly pick up a paper or magazine these days without being told that the American economy is staggering, the western world is declining, and that the leaderless drift of the free nations is toward division, disruption, recession, and maybe even war.

Newsweek's cover this week proclaims A World of Woes, and portrays a helpless Henry Kissinger bound down like Gulliver in Lilliput, "bedevilled by foreign crises on all sides." Likewise, Time magazine features America and The World: A Moment of Danger. And it adds: Once Again, an Agonizing Reappraisal.

It is easy to understand all this gloom. Within the span of a few days, the shaky political and military structure of South Vietnam has collapsed in the northern part of that nation, Henry Kissinger's latest peace mission to the Middle East has failed, one of the most moderate and powerful figures in the Arab world, King Faisal of Saudi Arabia has been murdered, and Europe, torn by inflation and unemployment, has found its Mediterranean flank, from Portugal to Italy, Greece and Turkey, in political disarray.

Squabbling Mideast

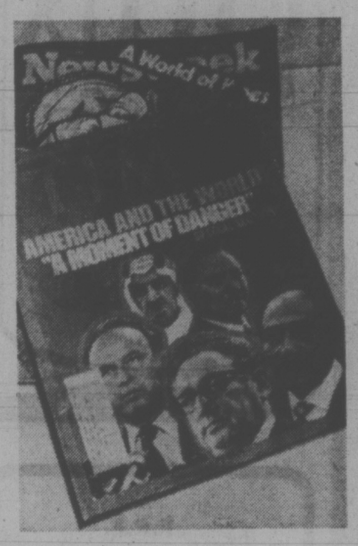
And yet, bad as all these events are, they are not perceived by the most experienced diplomats in Washington in quite such dramatic or pessimistic terms. In fact, many thoughtful ambassadors here feel that the disintegration of Nguyen van Thieu's authority north of the Saigon perimeter, the failure of Kissinger to get the squabbling Israelis and Arabs together, and the swing from the authoritarian right to the authoritarian left in Portugal were not surprising but almost inevitable.

What has surprised the old diplomatic pros around here is that the U.S. president and the secretary of state, who usually make things look better than they are, have lately been twisting a few tactical reverses into a strategic disaster, and making things appear even worse than they really are.

Kissinger has astonished both his friends and his critics by his melancholy analysis of this unfortunate coincidence of events. He has been talking privately about his recent disappointments as if this was a prelude to 1914, with misunderstandings leading to misjudgments, and maybe to confrontations between the major powers.

The feeling in the embassies here, if we hear it right, is that this may be a Kissinger disappointment, and obviously a serious problem in the Middle East, the Mediterranean, and Southeast Asia, but not a world crisis.

Europe and Japan, the foundations of American strategic policy, are not unhappy that we are finally faced with the realities of power in Vietnam. They always knew, as Kissinger did, that once American troops were pulled out of there, geography would tell. China and Russia, being much closer to the battlefield than the United States, would produce the arms, and Hanoi would produce the men and the spirit, to win the war.



BAD NEWS
... as bad as all that?

But the collapse at Hue and Da Nang, tragic in human terms, is not to be compared to the loss of Czechoslovakia and Eastern Europe, to the struggle for the freedom of Berlin, or the battle in the 1950s for Hungary. And Kissinger's failure to get a compromise in his second round negotiations with Egypt and Israel is regarded here as only a chapter in what promises to be a very long story. It may be a disappointment for Henry, but it is not a disaster for America.

Politics and journalism, however, are making it look like a disaster. The president and the secretary of state are talking about historic developments and "agonizing reappraisals." But actually, there is no "agonizing reappraisal" of American foreign policy here. This was only a phrase to scare the Israeli government.

After all the talk about impending domestic and foreign policy crises, congress went off on vacation, and the president went to Palm Springs, Calif. and worked on his golf back-swing, leaving all the apocalyptic predictions about the world to the reporters and editorial writers.

'Appalling Spectacle'

There is something funny and paradoxical about all this. America is the most optimistic of nations, but somehow it has always loved pessimistic predictions. Even its most heroic poet, drummer of the coming American age, Walt Whitman, had his dubious moments, and wrote the following over a century ago.

"Never was there, perhaps, more hollowness at heart than at present, and here in the United States. Genuine belief seems to have left us. The underlying principles of the states are not believed in ... the spectacle is appalling. We live in an atmosphere of hypocrisy throughout. The men believe not in the women, nor the women in the men ... the great cities reek with robbery and scoundrelism ..."

In other wards, it is a "world of woes," as Newsweek says today, and a "moment of danger," as Time magazine says, but maybe, as Whitman discovered later on, it is not really quite as bad as it seems. The Middle East is not going to war just because Henry K. didn't make it last time.

The future of the United States, China and the Soviet Union is not going to get worse because of Saigon — it may even get better — and Portugal, Italy, Cyprus and Turkey are not going to determine the fate of the Atlantic Alliance or relations between Washington and Moscow.

ROB BULL

Making a Martyr of PQ Journal

MONTREAL — It appears that Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau is proud of the latest case of federal government patronage to come to light. Patronage is usually understood to mean the use of public funds to help your political friends at the expense of your political enemies.

When Energy Minister Donald Macdonald intervened to cancel that part of a national advertising campaign on energy conservation to be placed with this city's newest daily, Le Jour, he was personally congratulated by Trudeau.

On its editorial pages, Le Jour supports the idea of Quebec independence and one of its columnists is Rene Levesque, president of the Parti Quebecois.

The PQ, it will be remembered, is a legally recognized political party, the official opposition in the provincial house

Selective Help

The party gained the votes of nearly one-third of the Quebec electorate in the last provincial election, a substantial majority of whom presumably support the idea of Quebec independence peacefully obtained. It can safely be stated that Le Jour is not a supporter of the federal Liberal party. This is not to say that it would be against such specific federal government programs affecting Quebec as, for example, energy conservation.

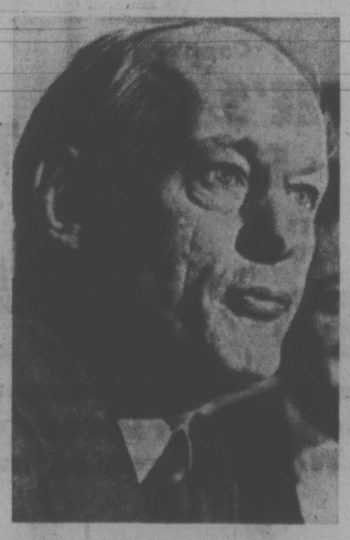
But Macdonald said: "A newspaper which favors the destruction of confederation should not expect any help from the federal government."

Health and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde said that he and other cabinet members would do the same as Macdonald. Nobody would accuse the federal government of supporting Quebec independence if it bought advertisements in Le Jour any more than a similar advertisement in the Toronto Star would indicate Ottawa support for that paper's particularly robust brand of Canadian nationalism.

But if the federal government does not want to help a newspaper, it has certainly in the past helped individuals who favor Quebec independence.

Pierre Vallieres, one-time supporter of the FLQ lived on a federal grant for several months and presumably Pierre Bourgault, an outspoken Quebec independentist, benefitted either directly or indirectly from federal funds for his translation into French of Pierre Berton's books on the CPR.

Despite the way in which Trudeau, Macdonald and Lalonde look at the question, however, what is at issue is not the help Ottawa may or may not give to individuals of institutions.



RENE LEVESQUE
... Parti Quebecois leader

This particular case of patronage has implications for the right of all Canadians, including those who do not particularly like the current political system, to information that their government considers to be of national importance.

There are 25,000 Canadian citizens who read Le Jour. If they want to find out about any federal government programs advertised on a national basis, it seems that they will have to buy another newspaper.

In the case of energy conservation, separatists drive cars, heat their homes and use modern appliances like everybody else. Apparently Macdonald does not want them to curb energy use and conservation is just for us federalists

While a private company has the right to choose to advertise in a newspaper or not if it does not like that paper's editorial stance, a government is in a different position. A government has responsibility not only for its supporters but for all the citizens it represents.

Growing government activity in all areas of life has not, until now, limited the freedom of Canadian newspapers to either criticize political leaders or support opposition parties.

Tactically Unsound

By imposing a loyalty test on an individual newspaper before handing out an advertising contract the government is limiting freedom of the press. If Le Jour has to change its editorial policy to participate in a government information program with all the other newspapers in the country, those other papers may eventually face similar pressures from municipal, provincial or federal officialdom.

But Ottawa's unliberal attitude, besides being philosophically questionable is tactically unsound.

Le Jour has successfully survived its first year of operation with a lower proportion of advertising than most Canadian newspapers.

Subscribers pay more than most other newspaper readers, (it costs 25 cents a copy) and they recently raised more than $100,000 to pull it out of a financial hole.

The government, with all the power of the public purse, is trying to fight a newspaper supported by taxpayers willing to chip in an extra quarter or two-dollar bill. Martyrs have been known to have unpleasant after-effects on their persecutors.

Vietnam

On April 1, following the 8 a.m. CBC radio news, Tom Braden commented on Vietnam. In effect, he said: We made these refugees. We promised them help and sent an army of blacks, poor whites, and unemployed. Is it too late to help now and wipe out our shame?

There are other questions. Why was the U.S. in Vietnam? Early in the Second World War France folded, but her then colony, Vietnam, kept on fighting. Then, their country occupied by the Japanese who sent food home, 2 million Vietnamese starved. At the end of the war, with Japan defeated, Vietnam proclaimed herself an independent nation under Ho Chi Mihn, a communist.

But France, unwilling to lose the country whose resources she had exploited for some 75 years while keeping around 90 per cent of the population poor uneducated peasants, sent an army. When after nine years of bitter struggle, with 80 per cent of her material supplied by the U.S., France admitted defeat, the giant U.S. took up the fight openly.

As Braden says, her first armies were drawn from her very poor — under her system the msot expendable and the most helpless.

Remember My Lai? Dr. Alje Vennema, a Canadian, didn't report such incidents — they were so common.

But, as another recent commentator said: "What had the poor southern devil to fight for? They had no incentive except their miserable wages — (furnished, unknowlingly, by the U.S. taxpayers).

One may hope it is too late to save Thieu, Mr. Braden. One may hope it is not too late to save some of his prisoners, many still in tiger-cages made for profit in the nicely Christian U.S. where men like Rockefeller can't count their millions and people who care can't count the world's starving millions.

This is how capitalism, euphemistically called free enterprise but actually greed, fights the idea of economic brotherhood. — Frances Wilcox, 202-820 Cook Street.

Helpless Children

Some years ago, a book of photographs was published in New York. The caption on one photograph of a Negro child was this "Who will speak for me?" I would like to ask the governments in Canada and its provinces the same question in regard to the Vietnamese orphans. Who will speak for them?

I am not questioning the sincerity of the many who want to help these children. My feeling is that the children should, nay must, have the protection and supervision of some government agency, at least until the children's happiness is assured. To do less is to continue the haphazard care of these helpless children. — Kathleen English, 740 Burdett Street.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of April 9, 1915

His Honor the lieutenant-governor and Mrs. Barnard last evening entertained a number of guests at a dinner in honor of Baron and Baroness Uriu, the visiting Japanese admiral and his consort, who went to Government House directly on their arrival in the city. In honor of the nationality of their visitors, the dinner table and reception rooms were decorated with boughs of Japanese cherry blossoms. In an editorial, the Times noted that the admiral was a veteran of the Russo-Japanese war of 1905, which was marked by one of the most decisive sea campaigns in the annals of war.

Saved From Private Villains, Inner Harbor Awaits Her Hero

By PAUL MOSS
City Hall Reporter

Congratulations, Reid Centre site, on the first anniversary of your miraculous redemption.

Yes, just think, it was a year ago today that you were saved from defilement at the hands of the horrid highrise builders, and gently deposited into the NDP government's bottomless land freezer.

Then, barely six weeks later, your developer-proof chastity belt was firmly locked in place when you were purchased by the provincial government for $1.7 million.

And today you remain as you were even before developer Sandy Reid first laid rapacious eyes upon you, back in the late 1960s: an aging, unattractive but oh-so-virginal parking lot.

With enormous face-lift potential.

The question is, — and it seems an appropriate time to ask it, not only on this anniversary but a week after the announcement of another key land purchase by the government in the Inner Harbor — how much longer do we have to wait for that potential to be realized?

A prominent planner has written: "The best thing that has happened to the Inner Harbor is that nothing has happened." In other words, this unique strip of waterfront hasn't been irrepaably spoiled by hideous development.

A valid point, say those at City Hall, but now wouldn't it be nice for "something" to happen? Apart from yet more studies and public hearings and commissioning of special consultants and advisory committees.

In the period of about a decade since the city first started actively aspiring to some sort of master plan for Inner Harbor renewal, the area has been studied to saturation by the experts. If all the copies of all the reports, plans and briefs were laid end to end they'd probably stretch from Laurel Point to Johnson Street Bridge and back again.

Emerging public awareness of the waterfront's importance as a priceless asset, greater citizen participation in planning decisions, private initiative, federal cash, but primarily civic and provincial actions — all these have brought about vast changes on the harbor scene in recent years.

Two notable examples are the Lower Causeway, completed a year ago, and the former Ocean Cement site, reclaimed from industry's grubby paws with $1 million of federal-provincial-city money and recently given "interim" promenade titivation.

But infinitely more important than such tangible improvements are the land purchases which have brought almost the entire horseshoe of the Inner Harbor foreshore under public ownership.

Today the government is the major landowner in the area with holdings totalling some 15 acres. Its acquisition last week of nearly nine acres below Belleville Street, from Marathon Realty Ltd., left only two segments of waterfront under private ownership.

These are the Laurel Point property where construction of a massive hotel-apartment complex (including a public park provided by the developer) is now under way; and a collection of old buildings and wharves on upper Wharf Street.

In between are the public lands, including the provincially-owned property leased as a terminal site to the Black Ball ferry company; the adjacent gas station site purchased by the city and promptly resold to the province; and the Malahat Building on Wharf which the city has arranged to lease from the federal government.

Thus the opportunity now exists to slot the pieces into the jigsaw, to marry all the diverse elements along two miles of shoreline in a cohesive development plan.

But the question remains: how, by whom and when? And it's a question that, on this particular anniversary, tends to generate much gloomy speculation among elected representatives and officials at City Hall.

If you ask them why, prepare for an hour-long tale of woe. A tale of heavy provincial trampling on city planning jurisdiction, of requests that have gone unanswered for two years or more, of inconclusive meetings with indecisive ministers, political grandstanding, non-existent co-operation . . . the list goes on and on.

Such criticisms flew thick and fast last summer, in a heated series of exchanges following the government's purchase of the Reid Centre site. And they were met by a counter-blast of charges, including accusations that the city has "stumbled along" with inept planning control of harbor development, and was on the point of selling out to development interests when the province intervened.

Whom one believes on who is to blame, for what has or has not happened, is perhaps irrelevant at this stage. Amid a renewed spate of name-calling last week, Ald. Sam Bawlf seemed to be urging his colleagues — notably the acid-tongued Mayor Peter Pollen — to use the Marathon purchase as an opportunity to forget past differences and strive for detente.

On that occasion the target for all the gibes was Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst, appointed by Premier Barrett to head an advisory committee which will advise on "the most appropriate development" of the Marathon property and the Princess Marguerite ferry.

But don't you fret, Jim, they love you really.

What sounded like nothing more than a cheap personal attack on one harmless MLA was probably the expression of a deeper frustration, aimed at the government he represents:

Frustration stemming from suspicions that the city of Victoria is being elbowed aside to a relatively minor role on the Inner Harbor stage, while big brother hogs the spotlight;

Frustration that the city's background of planning studies on the area, and its planning department's expertise, are virtually ignored;

Frustration because things have moved so slowly up to this point, and there isn't the slightest sign that they will suddenly speed up in the months ahead.

One of the examples of delay cited by the mayor is the notorious Reid Centre itself, and a brief look at the chronology appears to back up his argument:

April 8, 1974 — Reid site and the remainder of Wharf Street's waterfront, from the Causeway to Johnson Street Bridge, frozen by cabinet order-in-council (shortly after city council had approved the sale of the property by Reid to Commonwealth Holiday Inns).

May 20, 1974 — Resources Minister Bob Williams announced purchase of the property by the government for $1.7 million.

June 5, 1974 — Public hearing held by Williams' environment and land-use committee to consider proposals for future development of Reid Centre site and the entire Wharf shoreline.

July 26, 1974 — The government's special consultant, Rod Clack (former Victoria planner, now assistant general manager of the National Capital Commission in Ottawa) produced his report on "Inner Harbor development recommendations." Report warmly praised by Williams.

And since that date . . . nothing. At least, nothing that the city knows about; no meetings, certainly; no indications of any internal moves by Williams' ELUC secretariat.

Which makes rather a joke of Clack's observation that "the value of this report will depend very much on which happens next," and his suggestion that consensus on the report's contents be followed by "a six-month period for the preparation of a detailed planning and design program."

Another city peeve concerns the absence of any provincial response to repeated requests that the Black Ball ferry terminal be relocated, either to the CP terminal across the water or to the VMD site, to free that property for redevelopment.

This principle has been enshrined in every city plan for the harbor dating back to 1967, including the 1973 study done by acclaimed architect Arthur Erickson.

Pollen has made it a priority request in correspondence and sporadic meetings with cabinet ministers. In fact, he first formally phrased it in a letter to the premier dated Sept. 8, 1972 — just one week after the NDP came to power.

Yet last week, in announcing the Marathon-Marguerite coup, Barrett's press release made this incredible statement: "If the city agrees it would be worthwhile (the government will) consider negotiations for the relocation of Black Ball operations to the (CP-Marathon) site."

"If" . . . when aldermen read that one little word it came close to inducing febrile spasms of mild dementia.

One of the most significant recommendations in Clack's report was that some sort of super-agency be established to oversee the redevelopment of the Inner Harbor, and he stated quite bluntly that the magnitude of this task is obviously beyond municipal resources.

Williams himself, at the June public hearing last year, appeared to hint at some such move, when he said legislation would probably be introduced at the spring, 1975, session that would deal with "the development and protection of the provincial capital."

To date, however, no such legislation has appeared. Whether it will is anyone's guess.

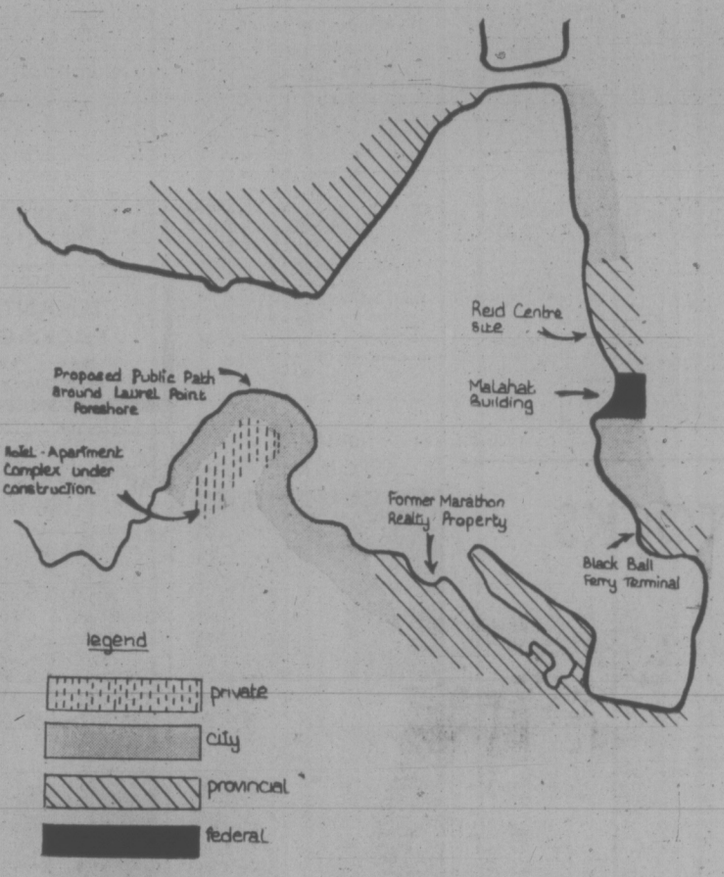
Meanwhile, what we now have is the "parochial conflict and divided jurisdictional planning authority" which Clack complained of in his report.

There's Williams and his Environment and Land-Use Committee; the Capital Improvement District Commission (a provincially-funded beautification agency that's a legacy of Socred days, under Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall; the city itself; and, lo and behold, the latest creature of all, Gorst's advisory committee.

It will be astonishing if anything emerges from this mess, beyond more jealousy, arguing and delay.

But until something positive is done, the Inner Harbor which politicians invariably call "Victoria's finest jewel" will remain nothing more than a pretty cheap and tawdry bit of costume jewelry.

The reports keep piling up



An All-Purpose Column for All Bases

russell baker

In an ominous and little-noted development, the growing rift has set off fresh speculation despite outwardly optimistic indications of an upsurge in the nation's moral fiber that has deeply alarmed sources close to Secretary Kissinger.

This places enormous stress on the right wing of the Republican party.

Fortunately, if the vital monsoon season begins two weeks early the alarming rise in the divorce rate will leave the United States no alternative, for, as Lord Acton observed many years ago, "Something has to be done about the State Department at the end of the tunnel."

Economists are baffled. This is perhaps the most significant fact as Pentagon hardliners study a highly secret report, which charges. This is not generally recognized. In an Arab world already giddy with power, few who understand the gravity of the situation are willing to talk for publication, but it can be said, nevertheless, and on the highest authority, as President Ford pointed out in his last news conference.

The struggle for power reveals some startling facts. What does all this mean for vice-president Rockefeller? What about the winter-wheat crop? Should the CIA be dismantled? Can Africa still be saved?

The ominous answer to these questions is: Who cares?

The gravest issue facing America today is war, race relations, women's rights, poverty, unemployment, air pollution, loss of privacy, the automobile, the troubled Middle East, commercialization of sport, ethnic jokes, heart attack or the powerful Ways and Means Committee, as well as divorce, alcoholism, violence on television, street crime, political corruption or credit buying.

Clothing is too expensive, the weather has been terrible and there is not enough respect for policemen. Despite the urgent need for immediate action, Washington insiders are saying privately, meanwhile, that no one can say for certain what it means for detente at this crucial point in the vital but too little understood SALT talks, despite disturbing evidence to the contrary, as witness the dangerous split in the Republican party, which will be officially denied, of course.

With the bicentennial year only nine months off, it is time to bite the bullet, tighten our belts and pull together, for as Benjamin Franklin observed many years ago, "If we do not all pull together, we shall all pull separately."

In a startling and little-noted development, this question is being widely asked in the drawing rooms of Georgetown where Washington's most powerful men privately believe there is more reason for hope than has been hitherto reported, citing secret intelligence reports that Leonid Brezhnev has been seen recently in public, which are buttressed by public intelligence reports that he has been seen recently in secret.

At the same time, however, it must be conceded, and that, obviously, is one situation the voters will not long tolerate, particularly in times as troubled as these in an ominous and little-noted development.

On balance, then, it is almost certain that although, on the one hand, quite obviously, the results seem clear, on the other hand, clearly, there is obvious reason to believe that, in the meantime, the results that seemed so obviously clear on the one hand may have become less obvious on the other hand.

This little-noted development is so ominous that an entire future column will be reserved to discussing its full implications.

Once Mighty Stock, Penny Now Buys It

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

A new penny mine stock listed this week is the remnant of a once-mighty company that set the British Columbia investment community on its ears a decade ago.

The listing, New Pyramid Gold Mines Ltd., is the result of a one-for-five consolidation of the shares of Pyramid Mining Co., which has been on the skids for nine years after its moment of glory.

The glory was a large copper discovery on its property in the Northwest Territories in 1965.

Shares of Pyramid had been selling for pennies and then moved up to about $1. When copper was discovered in November, 1965, the market went wild.

Every company that had claims within hundreds of miles enjoyed a great price surge on the market. Some companies with no ore and little hope went from pennies to $3 overnight.

But none surged as strongly as Pyramid. The price rocketed to $7, then $11, then $13, before cooling off. Subsequently it made one brief spurt to $17 and then began to fall.

It stabilized at $13 a share and then in May of 1966 it sold its copper holdings to nearby Pine Point Mines, which is owned by Cominco, which is owned by Canadian Pacific.

Pine Point, with a mine and mill, incorporated the orebody into its own holdings.

With the purchase, Pyramid shareholders were given two shares of Pine Point and one share of something called Coronet for every 10 shares of Pyramid held.

The Pine Point shares were worth a total of $80 and the Coronet was worth 12 cents (if it could be sold) and the shareholders were permitted to hang on to their Pyramid shares, which promptly fell from $13 to 10 cents when the ore was sold.

Total value of 10 shares of Pyramid had been $130. Total income from the sale was $80.12, plus the residual value of the Pyramid shares.

The residual value turned out to be not much.

Pyramid never regained its former glories and the price stayed down in the nickel and dime category for most of the intervening nine years.

It had been selling at 5 cents a share in recent days, which, as a result of the consolidation this week, is reduced to 1 cent a share value. It began and ended as a penny mine.

Meanwhile, the Pyramid stories still continue to circulate in brokerage offices. One Vancouver man is known to have purchased a $135,000 house in West Vancouver (1966 prices) as a result of his profits on Pyramid.

A Victoria man is reported to have purchased 10,000 shares at 30 cents each and sold near the top, clearing more than $100,000 and not knowing what to do with the money. This was before capital gains taxation.

Another is reported to have bought 1,000 Pyramid shares at $7 and sold them before the end of th week for $11, clearing $4,000.

And another is known to have bought 1,000 at $16, and sold at $13, for a loss of $3,000 in less than a week.

Pyramid is remembered by both the winners and the losers.

CROWN-Z QUARTER PROFITS DIP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. Tuesday reported net earnings for the first quarter of 1975 of $2.8 million or 35 cents a share, down 48 per cent from the same quarter last year.

Sales totalled $65.6 million, down 14 per cent, the company said in a news release.

In the first three months of 1974 the forest products company had net earnings of $5.4 million or 68 cents a share on sales of $76.5 million.

President Robert G. Rogers said in an advance summary of results that the falloff in earnings was due primarily to the continued depressed building materials markets, particularly in lumber.

Nanaimo Port Revenue Rises

NANAIMO (CP) — The port of Nanaimo made $114,600 on total revenues of $1.7 million in 1974, the Nanaimo Harbor Commission reported Tuesday.

This compares with total revenues of $1.1 million and an excess of revenue over expenditures of $116,900 in 1973. However the increased revenues in 1974 were on less export tonnage.

Wilkinson Co.

Vancouver-based Wilkinson Company, Ltd. has acquired the Toronto steel and metals distributing firm of Concept Metals Ltd. for an undisclosed sum.

Company president F. Cameron Wilkinson said Concept will continue under the management of its former partners but will eventually operate as the Ontario division of Wilkinson, thus making the British Columbia company one of the largest privately-owned steel and metals distributors in Canada.

C. J. Hodgson

C. J. Hodgson Securities of Montreal has purchased all the shares of T. A. Richardson and Co. Ltd. of Toronto, it was announced Monday. In a joint release, the two companies said that subject to the approval of the appropriate regulatory bodies, the companies will continue business under the name of C. J. Hodgson, Richardson Inc.

Grosvenor Inter.

Grosvenor International Holdings Ltd. reported 1974 net profit of $1,337,428 or $1.01 a share before extraordinary items compared with $1,035,638 or $1.07 a share in 1973.

The company said that total revenue in 1974 was $8,615,219, compared with $7,375,000 in 1973.

The company develops shopping centres, offices and apartments in British Columbia, Hawaii and Australia.

Consol.-Bathurst

The 1975 market outlook for pulp and paper products apperas soft, particularly for the first half of the year, William Turner, president of Consolidated-Bathurst Ltd., told an annual shareholders meeting.

Turner said this year's first quarter net earnings were close to net earnings of $1.27 a share in the corresponding period in 1974.

Following liquidation of inventory in the packaging and pulp sectors, carried out in the first three months of the year, demand may pick-up in succeeding quarters, Turner said.

Newsprint demand has experienced only isolated weakness, he noted.

Turner said hourly wages in pulp and paper and related industries have surpassed comparable wage rates in the U.S., despite lower Canadian productivity.

International Paper

J. Stanford Smith, chairman of International Paper Co., reported earnings for the first quarter of 1975 of $47 million, or $1.06 a common share, a 14 per cent increase over $41 million, or .93 cents a share, reported in the same period last year.

Smith told shareholders at the 78th annual meeting that it would be unrealistic to expect the next three quarters of 1975 to show continued improvement unless there is a sharp turnaround in the economy.

The chief executive said many paper users, paper merchants, and converters "have been feeling the effects of the economic downturn and have been making extensive adjustments in their inventories."

"From a longer term standpoint, it appears that there will be renewed tightness in wood fibre and many pulp and paper products when the economy moves to higher levels."

Bralorne Resources

Bralorne Resources Ltd. is holding off putting its gold prospect in the Bridge River area of British Columbia into production until the provincial tax situation changes, the company said in its annual report.

The property has 233,000 tons of recoverable proven and reasonably assured gold ore above the 3,900-foot level with an average grade of .3 troy ounces a ton, the company said.

A company feasability study showed the prospect could make a mine with gold prices of $175 a troy ounce and taxes of less than five per cent of gross income, the company said.

The provincial super royalty would take 50 per cent of all revenue above $127.09 a troy ounce, Bralorne reported.

EXECUTIVE CO-ORDINATOR
SOUTHEASTERN ALBERTA COMMUNITY RESOURCE CENTRE

The Southeastern Alberta Community Resource Centre project represents a planned integrated effort to co-ordinate the delivery of health and social development services. A major goal is to achieve a balanced community involvement in the delivery of these services so that the services are congruent with the needs of the community.

Reporting to the Board of Directors, the Executive Co-ordinator is responsible for the implementation and development of the project. Emphasis will be on designing a comprehensive regional planning framework, on community and professional education and on liaising with agencies and professionals. Also involved is the operation and administration of a central health and special service centre (CRC building) housing 18 community agencies. An integral part of the project will be an ongoing internal and external evaluation.

Requirements include a basic knowledge of research methodology, some institutional management experience and a good knowledge of health and social service systems gained through experience in the health or a related field.

LOCATION — Medicine Hat, Alberta.
SALARY — The position will be of interest to those presently earning in excess of $18,000.

REGIONAL DIRECTOR
NORTHERN HEALTH & SOCIAL SERVICES BOARD
High Level/Fort Vermilion
Alberta

"It's basically a matter of bringing the services under one umbrella . . . the advantage is that you're not talking to someone 500 miles away expecting them to know the conditions here." This statement by a board member reflects this new concept of providing for the integration and coordination of health and social development services to a large area in Northern Alberta and its widely scattered population of 10,000. As the Chief Executive Officer reporting to the Board, the Regional Director's responsibilities will include administration of: two hospitals, a public health program, mental health services and preventative social services. The Director's challenge is to take this exciting concept and make it work at the operational level.

We know it won't be easy to find the right person. Personal ingredients will include a sense of adventure, highly self-motivated, desire to achieve results and a high degree of commitment. A work history with various health and social services disciplines including a knowledge of their policies and administration. Supervisory and administrative background is also required. Academic credentials include a university degree in a related discipline or a certificate in hospital organization and management augmented by additional experience or an equivalent.

LOCATION — High Level, Alberta
SALARY — The position will be of interest to those presently earning in excess of $18,000.

CUPE Lifts Pickets From Rock Concert

VANCOUVER (CP) — A sell-out rock concert at the Pacific Coliseum went ahead as scheduled Tuesday after the Canadian Union of Public Employees decided against further picketing of the building.

The Pacific National Exhibition obtained an ex-parte injunction Monday against members of CUPE Local 686 who had earlier picketed the PNE as an ally of radio station CKLG.

The local has been on strike for a first contract at CKLG since Feb. 1.

The picket line, sparked by advertising on CKLG for the concert by the British group Pink Floyd, resulted in a walkout at the Coliseum of members of three unions involved in preparing the building for the concert.

Richard Hughes, Local 686 business agent, said the union could have fought the injunction but decided against it because "we don't want to sponsor a riot."

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A 16-year-old Vernon youth, convicted of delinquency and criminal negligence causing death, was sentenced to a term of indefinite probation when he appeared in court Tuesday. The juvenile was found responsible for a hotel fire at Merritt, Sept. 3, in which two people died.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Labor Relations Board hearing requested by the Construction Labor Relations Association to halt picketing by the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union, was postponed Tuesday until today. The lathers have been picketing at Vancouver International Airport since Friday over a jurisdictional dispute on a construction site with the carpenters' and joiners' union. Airport traffic has not been disrupted.

SMITHERS (CP) — Conflicting production cost figures are hampering efforts of British Columbia cattlemen to negotiate a farm income assurance agreement with the provincial government, according to a B.C. Federation of Agriculture spokesman.

Don Knoerr, chairman of BCFA's cattlemen's committee, said that public statements made by Canadian Cattlement's Association officials in Calgary last week are not helping to speed up an agreement between the provincial government and cattlemen.

VANDERHOOF (CP) — Village council and Local 1632 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees reached agreement Tuesday on a one-year contract. Base rates for laborers increased to $5.40 an hour from $4.40, and for inside workers, junior clerks will earn $620 a month, an increase from $450.

KELOWNA (CP) — Employees of Four Seasons Radio Ltd., which operates local radio station CKIQ, asked the Canadian Labor Relations Board Tuesday to decertify Local 1707 of the Association of Commercial and Technical Employees as their bargaining agent. The 19 employees in the bargaining unit said they don't want to be members of a union.

MAYOR AGREES TO MEET UNION

SURREY (CP)—Mayor Bill Vander Zalm said Tuesday night he plans to accept an invitation to attend a union meeting of striking municipal workers tonight.

"I think it's unprecedented for a mayor to go to such a meeting," Vander Zalm said. "It's like a company manager being invited to a union meeting."

The mayor of this Vancouver-area suburb said he was willing to talk to the members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees but he could not negotiate.

He blamed outsiders for the noisy CUPE demonstration that disrupted a Surrey council meeting Monday and estimated that a third of the people who crowded into the council chamber were CUPE members.

The Surrey workers have been on strike since February. They are seeking unspecified increases on current wage scales that include $4.48 an hour for laborers and $447 a month for clerical workers.

EX-RCMP ADMITS PERJURY

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former RCMP drug squad sergeant, now serving a six-year prison term for trafficking in hashish, admitted in County Court Tuesday that he perjured himself at his own trial.

Donald Kinlock made the admission under protection of the Canada Evidence Act while being cross-examined at the trial of Robert Roland Burns, 30, and Joseph Augustine Donnelly, 30, both charged with possessing hashish for the purpose of trafficking on Feb. 3, 1972.

Kinlock was in charge of the Burns-Donnelly investigation and testified earlier that a quantity of substance believed to be hashish was found under the floor of a mini-van camper which came to Vancouver on board a ship.

He testified Monday it came from an exhibit in another case which had been seized by RCMP but that he had denied this at his own trial.

100-Foot Slide

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The Trans-Canada Highway 25 miles east of Revelstoke was closed for two hours by a slide Tuesday. A department of highways spokesman said the slide covering the main road is eight to 10 feet deep and 100 feet long.

Union Urges Search

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union has sent telegrams to the federal ministers of defence and transportation, demanding a full scale search for possible survivors of the fishing boat Lady Sylvia II that capsized March 16.

The UFAWU said in a news release it has asked the search to be undertaken between Estevan Point on the west coast of Vancouver Island and Cape Cook.

The union said the search should be held because of the recent discovery of a dinghy from the vessel. Tom Goshko and his two sons were aboard the boat and the union says they might have been wearing wet suits with oxygen equipment when the boat encountered difficulty.

Union president Homer Stevens said in the telegram that 25 years ago a fisherman with a broken leg, the survivor of another capsized craft, survived for 23 days in the same area.

MAN EXPECTED BACK ON JOB

Martin Bolton, 21, whose suspension Monday led to the booking off sick of 11 inside workers at the Victoria post office, is expected back at work Thursday.

Bolton was suspended and escorted from the post office by police after he walked into a supervisor's office and made demands for on-the-job training.

The workers who booked off sick were back on the job Tuesday.

Therapy Change Sought

Sooke school board's speech therapist wants students to come to her school board office for treatment from now on, rather than her going out to the schools.

Main objection to going out to the schools is that there she normally sees only the child, not his parents, said therapist Lynn Robinson.

If the child must come to school board offices on Sooke Rd. to see Robinson, one of his parents is forced to come if only to drive the child, she said.

Then the parent can sit in on the treatment session, which is very important, said Robinson.

Having children come to her office will also save on travelling time for her.

Principal Switches Announced

William Harris will become principal of Willows elementary school when its long-time principal Tom Curteis retires in June.

Harris is principal of McKenzie elementary.

Curteis, Willows principal since 1952, successfully fought a Greater Victoria school board attempt to transfer him to another school in 1973.

N. Saanich Subdivision Agreement

North Saanich council Monday gave three readings to a bylaw that will allow the municipality to enter into an agreement for the first phase of the large Dean Park subdivision.

First phase would see 113 houses built on the site stretching from the park on East Saanich Road and west from the federal agriculture research station.

The agreement will be entered into on final passage of the bylaw.

$10,000 Evidence In Trial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Prosecutors today produced a second bundle of bills totalling $10,000 which they said was used in 1973 by former treasury secretary John B. Connally to conceal a bribe he allegedly took two years earlier.

FBI agent Philip A. Greb broke the seal on a canvas bag and produced three envelopes containing $10,000 in $100, $50 and $20 bills. He identified them as the bills he removed on Nov. 27, 1973, from a safety deposit box used by star prosecution witness Jake Jacobsen.

Connally is on trial for allegedly receiving bribes totalling $10,000 in 1971 for his help in securing an increase in the government price support for dairy farmers.

Jacobsen, a former lawyer for the Associated Milk Producers Inc., has testified that he gave the money to Connally in 1971. Two years later when they feared the bribe would be discovered, he said that he and Connally arranged to replace the money by putting $10,000 into a safety deposit box.

He said their first attempt to replace the money was scuttled when Connally discovered the bundle contained bills that could not have been in circulation in 1971.

The money exhibited today was said to be a second batch of bills that Jacobsen received from Connally wrapped in a newspaper on Nov. 25, 1973, in Austin, Tex.

FBI agent Edward Leary testified he conducted an inventory of the first bundle found it contained 49 bills bearing the signature of George P. Shultz, who became treasury secretary in June, 1972, succeeding Connally.

Connally's lawyer has pictured Jacobsen as a man who expressed deep gratitude to the former treasury secretary — but made accusations about him as his own troubles mounted.

Before The Judge

A 22-year-old Victoria man pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court Tuesday to five counts of fraud and two counts of false pretences.

Crown prosecutor Clarence Vause said Mark Jonathan Twiss fraudulently obtained $195 in cash on two occasions Jan. 13 at Central Esso Gas Station in Prince George through the use of a stolen credit card. Vause said Twiss also defrauded the gas station five times on Jan. 15.

Twiss had already pleaded guilty to 10 counts of false pretences April 1 when he said he "picked up" a Woolco credit card to buy his girlfriend presents. About $268 worth of merchandise was obtained from Woolco, 3651 Douglas.

Judge Harold Alder remanded Twiss to April 14 for presentence report and sentencing on all counts.

Stephen Kenneth Hawley, 21, of 280 Superior, was found guilty of possession of marijuana and sentenced to one month in jail and placed on one-year probation.

Police said Hawley ran away when they attempted to search him in the 1300 block Government on Dec. 12. He was pursued down Government into the 1400-block where the route was cut off by a police car. Hawley turned west on to Johnson and as he was passing 580 Johnson, police saw him throw three plastic baggies into the doorway.

Hawley was finally stopped in the 500-block Johnson. About two ounces of marijuana was found in the baggies.

Waiter Laughed Down the Barrel of a Gun

Many talk of the great value of a sense of humor and of the ability to laugh in the face of adversity, and all that.

That's what Gerry Helmer did, alright. Only he laughed in the face of a gun-barrel. And now they call him the "Crazy Indian" down at The Halfway House beer parlor in Esquimalt.

Happy-go-lucky Gerry is a waiter. But he hadn't been waiting that night when he and Halfway House manager Clyde Ogilvie and tapman Ron Champion finally ventured outside.

It was Gerry's night off and he had been in "having a few beers and playing pool." That's why he was "kind of mad" when a would-be bandit wearing a nylon face-mask thrust a gun at them and ordered the trio inside.

The men told the bandit they weren't going back inside and that if he wanted to get in he should "bang on the door." Then they not only ignored him and walked to their cars, but also made fun of him.

Finally, in a fit of rage, he fled and Gerry and his mates had foiled what could have made it 12 holdups in Greater Victoria in two weeks.

Right now, that figure is 11 and the crime wave is keeping police on their toes. But they are quick to warn other victims in a holdup not to try heroics.

HELMER
. . . sense of humor

Ogilvie and Helmer both admitted they weren't convinced it was a "real gun" that was being pointed at them.

But Detective-Sergeant Doug Sproxton of the Esquimalt police says they found the discarded face mask and the gun. It was real, all right — a .22 automatic — and what's more it was fully loaded with a bullet in the chamber.

"They were a trigger-finger away from death," says Staff-Sergeant Angus Stewart of the Victoria police.

"Life is pretty valuable," points out Stewart. "You can't buy it back, so don't take risks to save a few dollars and cents.

"The best thing is to do what you're told. It's kind of silly fooling around with someone who is obviously desperate. If you're approached by someone with a gun or a knife, hand over the money."

Stewart says the police are grateful, of course, for any help they can get but warns people to stay their distance if they should follow bandits who are on foot or in getaway cars.

Rev. John Watson of the First Baptist Church agrees.

"It's foolish to play the hero in these cases because you endanger not only your own life but the lives of others," says Watson, who was shopping in the Safeway store in the Fairfield Plaza last week when a bandit held up an employee and then fired through the windows while escaping.

"People ought to be involved but they must realize we have officers in our society who are trained to handle this kind of situation. When a man is distressed and nervous, I don't think this is any time for conversation. The best thing is to keep quiet."

When told the police believe the wave of holdups to be drug-related, Watson said "This is one of the sad features of our society that once people become dependent on these drugs, it indicates they'll stop at nothing to feed their habit."

The police have some suspects, but mostly the holdups are unsolved. And the police aren't saying much except to warn again, like Saanich Detective-Inspector Charles Truitt did last week, that small businesses try to keep as little cash as possible on the premises. And that merchants should contact police immediately they see anyone hanging around their store.

In many of the shops, they're pretty touchy. The manager of the Fairfield Plaza Safeway wouldn't say a thing except "No comment." I think he's been listening to too many politicians.

If was the same in the other holdup stores. I didn't realize before how suspicious I look.

In the Hollywood Grocery on Lillian Road, only a bandit's hop from the Fairfield Plaza, a Chinese woman assistant looked startled when I walked in.

It was at the Hollywood Grocery that a man wearing dark glasses and a peaked cap produced a brown paper bag with the words "I have a gun . . . give me the money" written on it. He escaped with about $80.

I produced only a notebook and escaped with stony silence. She was sure I had come to case the joint again.

This kind of excitement is pretty new, too, to 25-year-old Gerry Helmer, who comes from the tiny village of Massett in the Queen Charlotte Islands and has only been working at The Halfway House for three months.

But as Ogilvie, who gave up being a chartered accountant when he moved from Calgary two and-a-half years ago, pointed out, it was Gerry's sense of humor that snapped the tenseness of the situation.

"The holdup man was obviously someone who had been drinking in the beer parlor," said Ogilvie. "And it was obviously someone who knew the routine and knew we weren't carrying any cash."

"I knew what was happening right away," said Ogilvie. "I was a bit apprehensive but I was in front so I just kept walking.

"We looked at him as though he was nuts and when he said 'Hold it, back inside,' Gerry said 'To hell with you, it's my day off and I'm going home.'

"Well that kind of broke it up, the kid didn't know what to do," said Ogilvie.

The bandit persevered for a while, though. He warned the men twice he was going to shoot but Helmer told him he probably couldn't hit the broad side of a barn.

When he insisted he would, in fact, shoot, Gerry told him: "Well, for Chrissake shoot and quit talking about it!"

"That's when he finally gave up and fled," said Ogilvie.

"A lot of people say I was crazy," admits Gerry, "but what the hell, I didn't think anyone would shoot down three people. I felt it was probably his first or second robbery attempt."

What about next time, though?

"Well, now that's something else," says Gerry with a grin. "I think I'd probably hesitate next time . . . but you never know."

HOSTAGE:

Only the Gunman Panicked —Mother and Tot Kept Cool

Victoria Times
WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9, 1975 13
SECOND SECTION

Diana Smith, with Sadie

By LIZ HUGHES

Diana Smith got up early this morning and took her three-year-old daughter Emily to the nearby nursery school she normally attends.

Emily would have been in school Tuesday, the day a desperate gunman broke into the Smith's Leonard Street home and took both mother and daughter hostage, except that she had a stomach ache.

Mrs. Smith wouldn't normally have been home on Tuesday morning either. Her washing machine is broken and she usually takes the family laundry to an Oak Bay Avenue laundromat, but, because Emily was home, she decided to wash out some things in the bathroom.

That's where she was when a young man with a gun burst into her house and took her and Emily hostage.

The man smashed windows in the house with his gun butt and rushed to an upstairs room, taking Emily with him and instructing Mrs. Smith, 28, not to let on to police he was there.

When police knocked on the door of her apartment in the house at 1116 Leonard, Mrs. Smith showed them around the downstairs part of the house, and even led them past the gunman's jacket which was lying on the couch.

"I had no choice," she said today. "He had my little girl upstairs."

Police realized later the man was in the Smith home.

"I was scared, but so was he. He was really shaky I guess because he'd just been in a car accident and he had a cut lip."

At one point, the man sat down in the kitchen and cried, she said.

Mrs. Smith decided the best thing to do was to get the man out of the house.

"I told him I had a car and that I'd drive him somewhere so he could get away, but I thought I'd be doing the driving. I sure didn't want him driving in the condition he was in."

But the hunted man had other ideas and he bundled Mrs. Smith and Emily under a blanket and took them out to the car where he took over the steering wheel.

"We were driving all over the road with the police after us. He was screeching around corners and going through stop signs. I was sure we'd all be killed."

For at least part of the wild chase, the man held Emily in his lap, but Mrs. Smith finally persuaded him to hand her daughter over to her.

She tried at one point to escape from the car, but the man yelled at her "don't you dare try it."

"I was scared he might shoot us, but he kept telling me he wouldn't shoot us, he was just trying to scare the police. He said 'I wouldn't shoot you guys' and finally I believed him and trusted him," she said.

At about 1 p.m., two hours after the man had first entered the house, he let his hostages go in the Victoria West area and ran off on foot.

Mrs. Smith drove to Grassick's Transport at 220 Esquimalt and phoned police to tell them she and her daughter were all right.

She was taken to the police station and then home to be re-united with her husband, Bob, who works for the provincial government and only learned about his wife and daughter's whereabouts from friends.

Today, sitting in her sunny living room in front of the smashed windows, Mrs. Smith had time to reflect on what had happened.

Emily, she said, didn't really understand what had happened. The small girl was scared when the car crashed into a pole near the Ross Bay Cemetery, but she didn't seem to have been affected by the ordeal.

"I really felt kind of sorry for him," she said of the gunman.

"He told me in the car that all he really wanted was some money so he could get away.

"He said all he wanted is a simple life, to get away from all this. He was only a young kid."

Mrs. Smith appeared calm this morning as she fended off the affectionate advances of the family dog Sadie.

She laughed and called Sadie a "scardy." The dog apparently headed for a safe spot under the living room couch as soon as the man entered the house.

Mrs. Smith's neighbors feel themselves pretty lucky. Ann Smith who lives in the adjacent apartment suite with her three-year-old daughter, Carla, was babysitting for a neighbor when the man first appeared.

"My door is first when you come up the steps and if I had have been home it probably would've been me," she said.

Bea Nelson who lives in the downstairs apartment of the same house with her seven-year-old daughter, Cyn-Dee, sat through the siege on her living room couch with a loaded .22-calibre rifle across her lap.

"It's such a quiet neighborhood," she said Tuesday afternoon when things had quietened down."

CRIME SPREE BLAMED ON COSTLY H

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Victoria Ald. Sam Bawlf claimed Tuesday that the city's sudden dramatic increase in the incidence of violent crime is largely due to a doubling of the street price of heroin in the past few weeks.

And he urged fellow members of city council to press senior governments for the establishment of "controlled maintenance" programs, to ensure that addicts do not have to turn to crime to support their habit.

Bawlf said probably more than 50 per cent of all serious crimes in the city are drug-related.

"I think it is reaching the point, in terms of policing costs and especially danger to the community, where strong representations ought to be made to senior governments to deal with this problem," he told council's caucus meeting.

"The whole thing has been passed to us through their inactivity. The municipalities have this huge problem of trying to police a bunch of pathetic maniacs who can't afford to support their habit.

"Every day there's someone out there staring down the barrel of a gun because of these guys . . ."

After the meeting, Bawlf said he intends to raise the proposal for government-controlled maintenance programs "by that I mean giving them the drugs and keeping them under control" — through the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

He said he fully expects his view will be criticized for advocating permissiveness, but it is the practical and logical choice of "the lesser of two evils."

"I would rather see the people who have slid into this morass of drug dependency have their drugs under controlled conditions that drag innocent people daily into terrible danger by way of violent crime," he said.

Bawlf said he has heard that the price now charged Victoria heroin addicts is $55 per cap — roughly double what it was two or three weeks ago.

Daffs Cool Off With Draft

Part of a shipment of three million daffodils from Geoff Vantreight's bulb farm on Tyndall are keeping cool in a downtown Toronto brewery.

Brewers' Warehousing Ltd. came to the rescue when the Canadian Cancer Society was forced to cancel its annual daffodil tag day and parade Friday because of the snow storm that hit Toronto and other eastern cities.

"They still went ahead with their parade," Vantreight said today. "But with a temperature of 24 degrees and 35 miles-an-hour winds there was nobody around to see it."

The brewer's co-operative offered the society storage until they can carry out a door-to-door canvass.

Most of the daffodils arrived on time but some were delayed because of the same storm.

"The plane couldn't get through to Toronto. It was turned back at Winnipeg and finally had to return to Vancouver," Vantreight said.

In 1974 the society raised $240,000 from the sale of daffodils and officials are optimistic that close to that amount will be raised this year.

The city of Hull, Que., also helped bail out the society, buying 800 cartons of the blooms for its own Daffodil Day. Vantreight said Hull has already ordered 225 cartons directly.

He described this year as the worst ever, the cold weather slowing down the blooming of the daffodils.

"It was a weather situation all the way. We had to pick some prematurely and bring them along in the hothouse so they'd be in good condition," Vantreight explained. "We worked like the devil to get them there (Toronto). It was too bad the storm had to hit."

Gati Not on Agenda

Victodia symphony board of directors will hold a special meeting Thursday afternoon, but will not vote then on whether to renew conductor Laszlo Gati's contract.

A board member said the Thursday meeting was called "in view of the circumstances," a reference to the controversy surrounding the board's decision to meet April 17 to discuss Gati's contract.

It is believed that one of the topics to be discussed at the Thursday meeting is a letter to be sent from the board to all symphony members.

SCHOOL CONSUMER COURSE

A new consumer education program developed jointly by the provincial government and the Greater Victoria School Board will be started in schools shortly.

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young said a consumer educational kit is in the finishing stages and will be circulated to schools in the province.

Ms. Young said her department has dealt with 3,839 complaints in the last year, a vast increase over the number of complaints during the previous administration in 1972.

Since January her department has managed to obtain for consumers in refunds and rebates a total of $69,630 and since July 1974 a total of $136,628.

Noting an increase in the number of consumers "out on a financial limb" because of debts, Ms. Young said the department's debtors assistance program has handled 1,320 complaints.

Realtor Appeals Suspension For 'Misconduct' on Sale

A Victoria realtor "misconducted himself" in a proposed house transaction in 1972, county court was told Tuesday.

Brian Smith, representing the superintendent of insurance, told Judge Montague Drake that Gregory Cabana's licence was suspended for three months but the suspension was not put into effect pending the appeal.

He said Cabana didn't disclose in writing to the house owner that he was purchasing the property for himself; indicated receipt of a deposit when no deposit was received; and inferred the house was being purchased under a guaranteed sales plan when it wasn't.

Smith said Cabana obtained a listing in July, 1972, for a house at 3394 Aloha in Colwood owned by Bertram and Doris Saxon.

Mrs. Saxon said she and her husband were assured of $40,000 by the closing date of Oct. 14, 1972, and they arranged to buy another house. But Cabana never completed purchase of their house.

She said Cabana never said he was buying the house for himself rather than Island Homes, the realty company which employed him then, and the house was ultimately sold for $36,900.

Realtor Kenneth Jensen, a director of Island Homes in 1972, said the "implication" was that Cabana was buying the house for himself but the company did not have a deposit and it didn't have a guaranteed sales plan.

He agreed with Cabana's lawyer, Hugh McMillan, that the realtor took the position throughout that he had behaved correctly.

Tery Fortune, an officer and director of Island Homes, said he was concerned that the agreement for sale was under company letterhead, that a deposit of $1,000 was mentioned which the company hadn't received and the company didn't have a guaranteed sales plan referred to in the agreement.

Cabana told the court he had been a realtor for five months before joining Island Homes. While working for Mears Oak Bay Realty, he said he was approached by Saxon and listed the property.

The listing expired July 12, 1972, without a sale and he agreed to carry on trying to sell the house when he moved to Island Homes and if he was unsuccessful he would buy it for his personal use.

He said Saxon was insistent the guaranteed sales plan be put into the agreement. (Saxon had said earlier this was Cabana's idea).

The $1,000 deposit was placed with his lawyer of that time and "I had arranged complete financing."

Asked about Island Homes policy that salesmen are supposed to make a declaration if they are making a personal purchase, he said some offices have specific wording that goes into an interim agreement in such cases but he hadn't seen this at Island Homes.

"It was a personal arrangement between the Saxons and myself," he said.

He also said the Saxons hadn't disclosed the existence of a second mortgage.

The case continued today.

Nothing Lax About Laxton

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Two coaches who have been accused of fashioning hockey teams out of the same mold weren't very far apart Tuesday.

The difference New Westminster coach Ernie McLean saw in his Bruins' 3-1 Western Canada Hockey League playoff victory over Victoria Cougars was "our goalie."

Neither McLean nor Ginnell will get much of an argument from the 4,074 fans who watched the Bruins take a 1-0 lead over the Cougars in their best-of-seven Western Division final.

Laxton, the Bruins' goaltender, rated the superlatives and centre Fred Berry made the break work to New Westminster's advantage.

Property of the Cougars until he was sent to the Bruins in a pre-season deal, Berry scored a breakaway goal at 6:34 of the third period to snap a 1-1 tie and provide Westminster with its important opening-game nod at Memorial Arena.

Rookie Mark Lofthouse opened the scoring for the Bruins and defensive specialist Barry Smith supplied insurance when he pumped the third goal into an empty net in the final minute of play.

League scoring champion Mel Bridgman counted Victoria's only goal. It was his eighth in seven playoff games, all coming on power-play situations.

Second game will be played Thursday in New Westminster's Queen's Park Arena and the third in Victoria on Saturday.

Laxton was the game's standout. He held the Bruins together with a series of sparkling saves in the first two periods. The 19-year-old was particularly brilliant in the final 10 minutes of the second period when Cougars held a wide edge in play and enjoyed numerous good scoring chances.

Laxton finished up with 41 stops while Victoria's Bob Leslie, also performing strongly, stopped 30.

Both teams gave their coaches and the fans a strong, disciplined style of hockey. It was typical, hard-checking playoff hockey without any hint of rough-housing that had been predicted.

Referee Ron Fournier, in command all the way, tagged Bruins with seven penalties and the Cougars with six. All were minors.

"I guess I should be surprised," said McLean, referring to the absence of major penalties. "People have been telling me that my players can't shoot, can't skate and can't pass. All they can do is intimidate.

"But seriously, I have to give credit to Laxton and my defence.

"Any time you can hold the Bridgman line to one goal — and a power-play effort at that—then you know you've played a whale of a defensive game."

Ginnell felt his team's inability to break a 1-1 tie, while dominating play in the late stages of the second period, was the turning point.

"We had enough chances to win it then," he said. "After that, I felt the game was going to go to the team that got a break. If we get it, we win. They got it," he added.

The Cougars played their best in the first two periods when they outshot Bruins 31-18. Much of the reason for their offensive success then stemmed from cohesion that existed between forwards and defence.

The Victoria defence headmanned the puck coming out of its own zone and the forwards, in return, used their point man to advantage in the attacking zone.

Most of the Cougars' best scoring opportunities were the result of rebounds off shots from the points.

That cohesion began to disappear in the third period however. More and more individualism crept into Victoria's play and that made it less difficult for the checking-minded Bruins to give Laxton greater protection.

First Period
1. New Westminster, Lofthouse (Shmyr) 3:55.
Penalties — Gustafson (V) 1:14; McNiece (NW) 4:44; Clippingdale (NW) 11:00; Hill (V) 13:45; Hochstetter (NW) 16:21.

Nordiques Hamstring Roadrunners

By The Canadian Press

Quebec Nordiques took advantage of a tired Phoenix team Tuesday night to defeat the Roadrunners 5-2 and take a 1-0 lead in their World Hockey Association best-of-seven, quarter-final playoff series.

The Roadrunners had spent all day Monday travelling from Phoenix to Quebec by way of Los Angeles, Chicago and Montreal. Coach Sandy Hucul said his club was forced into the round-about route when management of the Quebec team unilaterally decided the series would start Tuesday.

"It (the route) was the only way we could get here," Hucul said. "It's just a rotten deal by Quebec—Quebec made the decision to open here tonight, not the league."

The Phoenix coach could have a point. The other three quarter-finals were scheduled to begin at least 24 hours later than the Quebec-Phoenix round.

Tonight, Toronto Toros visit San Diego Mariners and Minnesota Fighting Saints open against New England Whalers at Hartford, Conn. The fourth series begins Thursday when Cleveland Crusaders visit defending champion Aeros at Houston.

The second game of the Nordiques-Roadrunners series is also scheduled Thursday at Quebec.

Quebec built up a 5-1 lead by in the first two periods. Wingers Rejean Houle and Renald Leclerc scored two goals each to raise a cheer from an otherwise listless crowd of 10,105 on hand for the Nordiques first playoff game in three seasons of WHA play. Michel Parizeau was the other Quebec goal-scorer.

The Nordiques led 2-0 before centre Robbie Ftorek scored for Phoenix at the 33-second mark of the second frame. But Houle's second goal of the night, this one on a power-play, and Leclerc's pair against Phoenix goalie Jack Norris, appeared to leave the Nordiques in the driver's seat as the third period started.

But the Roadrunners were stronger in the third period, dominating play and outshooting the Nordiques by a 21-6 margin.

General manager Maurice Filion of the Nordiques said his team had taken a good lead in the first two periods and then "sat on it" during the third.

He said Brodeur's his fine performance had made the difference between victory or defeat for the Quebecers.

On the other side, Hucul said he was proud of the way his team had rebounded in the final period.

"When you're tired you make mistakes and you have no concentration," the Phoenix coach said. "But one team was as bad as the other—we came back and tied them up in their own end for all of the third period."

PHOENIX (2) — Rob Ftorek (1st), Dennis Sobchuk (1st). QUEBEC (5) — Michel Parizeau (1st), Reiean Houle (1st and 2nd), Renald Leclerc (1st and 2nd). Attendance: 10,105.

Brice: Retirement May Mean More Work

In baseball hereabouts, it used to be: "Let George do it; and George, more often than not, obliged. Now, he's going to tell others how. Baseball should have it so good!

George Brice is probably Victoria's best-known amateur baseball player of the past six or seven seasons, nationally, but not counting 1974; and there's even been the suggestion that during that period he ranked in the top three of all Canada as a pitcher. And certainly his record of accomplishment would appear to bear this out, as he has been invited to play on Canada's national team on four separate occasions. If 1974 was a dark year, it was that he got a late start due to work commitments, suffered a sore arm because of lack of proper preparation, and figuratively couldn't get the side out.

And the apparent simple process of getting in shape for top-flight competition is what has prompted his decision to retire from active status this season. "It's a matter of time," he said, "not so much for the tournaments but getting ready, the weeks of training, running three times a week, the week in camp with the national team. The whole commitment is too big." If George was thinking nationally, it was for a good reason because there are three important competitions in North America this year. One is the Canadian at Vancouver in July, then there is the Inter-Continental Cup tournament in Montreal in August and also an event in Mexico.

So what's he to do? He's going to work with some of the city's better younger players and also with Wayne Norton, director of baseball development for B.C. and that work already has begun.

Two Clinics Billed Here

"We had a great clinic for coaches in Vancouver in January," he said. "A number of the Oakland players attended, on their own, as they had played with Norton during his 10-year professional career, and we had 600 coaches show up. That's how much of a success it was."

This week, the overall program continues in Victoria. There will be a clinic at Henderson Park Pavilion Thursday night at 6:30 under the direction of Norton and Brice; and then on Sunday, also at Henderson Park, there will be another clinic and one of the special guests will be Dave Graas of Nanaimo, a former Victoria player.

So that's only a start. Bvice for his part plans to work through the Victoria and District Baseball Association. He hopes to work out a plan to take some of the Babe Ruth junior-aged players in the Senior League and senior Babe Ruth players and hold workouts on Friday nights and Sunday mornings with a view to upgrading the youngsters.

This should act as a double incentive. This year the Senior League will again play inter-locking games with Vancouver and, as Brice is working in co-operation with Norton who also happens to be Canada's team coach, the possible rewards should be self evident.

"I am quite optimistic," Brice said. And as for the time spent, coaching is something Brice has always wanted to do.

Just for the Record

Meanwhile, he has the credentials.

He started his career here in Babe Ruth and graduated quickly. He played his first Senior League game when he was 16.

Since then it is estimated that Brice has pitched 420 games and won 340 for an 80 per cent average. Which isn't bad, anywhere. And in most places too is where Brice has performed. Besides winning most valuable player awards four times — 1956, 1962, 1964, 1970 — he won two games for the city team which won the Canadian championship in 1970, including the final, a 3-2 victory over New Brunswick. In 1973 he was asked to play for Vancouver and again won two games. The first was a three-hit 2-0 win over Saskatchewan and the second, the final victory over Manitoba.

In 1971 he played for Canada in the Pan-Am Games in Cali. He beat Venezuela 1-0 on a three hitter; pitched shutout ball for seven innings before tiring in a 3-0 loss to Nicaragua; worked in relief for three innings in a 2-0 win over the Dominican Republic; pitched the most innings for Canada and ended with an earned run average of 1.17 one of the best in the tournament.

In 1972 and 1974, he was invited to play for Canada, but declined because of time, work, money and family obligations.

Not so in 1973, however, He took the trip to Italy for the World and was honored by being selected to pitch the opening game for Canada against the U.S. He was lifted for a pinch hitter in the seventh after giving up only two hits and no earned runs but with Canada losing 3-1. His next start? He got shelled and was gone in six but Canada won.

Now, he simply wants to help. And, if that takes more time, he'll find it. For his pupils, it should be well spent.

Terrific Tom Ecstatic

By The Associated Press

Tom Seaver looked like Tom Terrific again Tuesday afternoon.

The veteran right-hander displayed the form missing last season when he surrendered six hits in pitching New York Mets to a 2-1 win over Philadelphia Phillies in their National League baseball opener.

"I'm ecstatic," said Seaver of his win over Steve Carlton.

In Tuesday's only other National League game, Atlanta Braves blanked Houston Astros 2-0.

San Francisco Giants and the Padres were rained out at San Diego. A game scheduled for Tuesday between Pittsburgh Pirates and the Cubs at Chicago's Wrigley Field was postponed last week because of a Midwest snow storm.

Seaver struck out nine batters and came up a winner because of Met newcomers Dave Kingman and Joe Torre. Kingman hit a long home run in the fourth inning and Torre delivered the game-winning single in the bottom of the ninth.

Seaver, who struggled to a sorry 11-11 season last year after being regarded as one of the game's top pitchers for many years, is the man on whom so much of the Mets' hopes rest for 1975.

"I couldn't be happier," said Seaver, who was nicknamed Tom Terrific when he became a star in the late 1960s. "I was strong all the way, throwing fairly hard with a good breaking ball. I didn't throw too many bad pitches."

The Phillies nicked him for a third-inning run on Dave Cash's double. But Kingman tied the score in the fourth, golfing a two-out, two-strike pitch far beyond the left field wall.

Felix Millan opened the Mets' ninth with a single — only New York's third hit and first since Kingman's king-size homer. Then Carlton walked John Milner on four pitches and missed with his first two to Torre.

On the next pitch, Torre singled.

Carl Morton's five-hitter and Darrell Evans' run-scoring single in a two-run fifth inning carried the Braves past Houston.

Playoff Pressure Puts Esposito Back in Form

By The Canadian Press

Maybe Phil Esposito needed only the sniff of Stanley Cup money to get the juices flowing again.

After enduring what was a slump by his standards in the second half of the National Hockey League schedule, the Boston centre re-discovered his first-half form Tuesday night to spark Boston Bruins to an 8-2 win over Chicago Black Hawks.

Phil scored three times as the Bruins drove his brother Tony from the Chicago goal in the first game of their best-of-three first-round series.

In other first-round opening games Tuesday night, New York Islanders downed New York Rangers 3-2, Pittsburgh Penguins edged St. Louis Blues 4-3 and Los Angeles Kings defeated Toronto Maple Leafs 3-2 in overtime.

Phil Esposito had an awesome first half for the Bruins, scoring 42 goals in their first 41 games, but produced only 19 goals in their last 39 games.

Tony, who had 29 saves, was lifted in the second minute of the third period after Phil's second goal gave the Bruins 7-0 lead. The Hawks' Esposito was replaced by Michel Dumas.

Greg Sheppard added two goals and Carol Vadnais, who also had three assists, Johnny Bucyk and Andre Savard one each for the Bruins. Dick Redmond and John Marks were the Chicago scorers.

The Rangers blew a 2-0 lead in an 8½-minute stretch of the third period.

Clark Gillies, a rookie from Moose Jaw, Sask., who scored 25 goals in the regular schedule, scored the decisive goal for the Islanders.

He split Ranger defencemen Gilles Marotte and Ron Greschner late in the third period to get in position for the winner.

The Blues twice blew two-goal leads. The Penguins overcame a 3-1 St. Louis lead in the third period on a pair of goals by Chuck Arnason, then won the game when Pierre Larouche, a 19-year-old rookie, scored with 2:31 left in the game.

Larouche, who led all NHL rookies with 68 regular season points, slapped in a 20-foot shot from the slot after taking a pass from veteran Vic Hadfield.

Mike Murphy took advantage of a second chance to give the Kings their win. A minute after Toronto goalie Gord McRae blocked a shot by Murphy, the Kings regained possession with a 2-on-1 break and Murphy took a pass from Gene Carr and scored the winner at 8:53.

Never behind, the Kings lost a chance to win in regulation time when Toronto's Ron Ellis rebounded a Dave Williams shot and knocked it past Rogie Vachon with 1:30 left in the third period.

A crowd of 12,426 saw Bob Berry and Carr give the Kings 1-0 and 2-1 leads. Blaine Stoughton had the other Toronto goal.

ROBBIE STARTS IN STYLE

By The Associated Press

Frank Robinson did something in his club's first game of the season no other American League manager has done for more than 20 years.

He hit a home run.

The homer started Cleveland Indians on their way to a 5-3 win over New York Yankees.

Robinson faces the twin hurdles of being baseball's first black manager and trying to be the first man to play for and manage an American League team since Lou Boudreau piloted the Indians and Boston Red Sox in the 1940s and early 1950s.

Mrs. Jackie (Rachel) Robinson, the widow of the first black man to play in the major leagues, threw out the first ball and said she was "proud, proud, proud to be here."

Then Robinson, who will be the Indians' designated hitter, hit his 575th homer in his first time at bat as manager.

In Tuesday's other American League games, Oakland A's nipped Chicago White Sox 3-2, Minnesota Twins crushed Texas Rangers 11-4 and Boston downed Milwaukee Brewers 5-2.

A game between Kansas City Royals and California Angels was rained out at Anaheim while Tuesday's scheduled opener between Baltimore Orioles and Detroit Tigers was postponed earlier because of a Michigan snowstorm.

Robinson brought a Cleveland crowd of 56,204 to its feet with his first-inning homer off New York's George (Doc) Medich.

The first player to greet him at home plate was winning pitcher Gaylord Perry, who has had a couple of publicized squabbles with Robinson.

"I wanted to let him know I was with him," said Perry, who scattered nine hits. "I was probably more happy for him than he was for himself."

Despite that dramatic homer, the Indians fell behind 3-1 in the second inning. But an old Baltimore team-mate of Robinson's, Boog Powell, hit a two-run homer and Jack Brohamer hit a run-scoring single and a sacrifice fly to beat the Yankees.

Vida Blue allowed four hits in seven innings and centre-fielder Bill North cut down the tying run at the plate in the ninth as the world champion A's opened their season.

Designated hitter Tony Oliva's three-run homer capped a six-run Minnesota assault against 25-game winner Ferguson Jenkins in the first two innings.

Bob Montgomery doubled home two of Boston's three runs in the third inning and Tony Gonigliaro made a triumphant return to the major leagues as the Red Sox spoiled the American League debut of Milwaukee's Hank Aaron.

Aaron, the Brewers' designated hitter, walked, struck out and grounded out twice. Conigliaro, Boston's designated hitter, helped set up a first-inning run with a hit-and-run single.

Buck Star Honored

Doug Barrie of Kelowna Buckaroos was named the most valuable player in the British Columbia Junior Hockey League on Tuesday.

Lane Lavik, a forward with Langley Lords, was chosen the most sportsmanlike player and Brian McCallister of Bellingham Blazers was picked as the league's top defenceman.

Meanwhile, Blazers advanced to the quarter-final round of the tier-two Centennial Cup competition by defeating host Coquitlam Comets 6-4 in overtime Tuesday.

Bellingham, the BCJHL champions, won the best-of-three series against Coquitlam, the Pacific Coast Junior League champions, 2-0 and now advance against Spruce Grove Mets, the Alberta League winners. Dates for that series have not been set.

Federation Resolutions Require Careful Thought

Delegates to the 19th annual B.C. Wildlife Federation convention May 1-3 in Kamloops will have some weighty problems to ponder in workshop sessions and subsequent voting on resolutions.

These resolutions, submitted by member clubs and regional associations, often have a habit of becoming government policy after being passed on the floor of the convention.

One of the most interesting resolutions out of 42 submitted this year was drafted by the Tweedsmuir Park Rod and Gun Club. It calls for the government to give the fish and wildlife branch full control over fish and wildlife.

Other resource agencies are starting to heed branch recommendations but wildlife managers still lack a lot of jurisdictional control over their area of responsibility.

As the resolution reads:

"WHEREAS the function of the fish and wildlife branch is to control and manage the wildlife of the province, and,

"WHEREAS the efficiency of the fish and wildlife branch requires that their policies and plans be not subjected to the arbitrary decisions of persons untrained in wildlife management,

"THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the fish and wildlife branch be the sole agency responsible to make decision directly affecting wildlife.

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the provincial government advise its regional districts that the expertise of government agencies such as the fish and wildlife branch must be adhered to in planning major changes in their districts."

In the supporting brief, the club points out that powers granted to the regional districts when they were formed are broad in scope and still "largely misunderstood by the general public."

"As these bodies expand and discover their powers they are beginning to move into areas of great concern to sportsmen and environmentalists . . . their decisions may in fact be based on personal prejudice or bias."

The trend in the past few years has been toward integrated resource use throughout the province but progress is slow and it would be unfortunate if this expanding power-base within the regional districts does anything to cause additional delays.

"The present danger is that the regional districts may — through ill considered decisions — upset or undo the goals that our fish and wildlife branch has labored towards for many years," states the brief.

Our own regional districts on Vancouver Island have a pretty good track record thus far on environmental concerns but there is no present way of ensuring that these boards will continue to heed the advice of fish and wildlife experts.

Some of the other resolutions ask for:

—A ban on capturing killer whales for display until studies show their population can support this practice and until more "humane and safe oceanariums have been developed."

—A proficiency test for bowhunters prior to obtaining a licence with the ability to place three consecutive arrows within a one-foot circle at 20 yards part of such an exam.

—An increase in non-resident fishing fees.

—A law making it illegal to waste the edible meat from any game bird or animal.

—A law restricting the harvest of trophy species — such as sheep, goat and grizzly bear — by non-resident hunters.

—An extended bowhunting season.

—An increase in the penalty for carrying loaded firearms in vehicles.

—Establishment of extra personnel — regional resource co-ordinators — in various parts of the province.

—Better protection for the Columbia River marshes, including opposition by the BCWF to any diversion of water from the Kootenay River.

—Increased protection for mountain caribou habitat, including a ban on logging above the 5,500-foot elevation throughout its range.

—Aid to municipalities from the provincial government for control and possible utilization of sewage waste.

—Exclusion of bear cubs and sows with cubs from the hunting season.

—Reduction of the daily bag limit on Canada geese from five to three.

— Developing a comprehensive program to control orchard damage in the fruit-growing areas of the province by game animals.

They Never Picked Charlie

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — "It's a great thing for Lee Elder, but ol' Charlie is the man who should be here," said a paunchy man with an official's badge in the players' dining room at Augusta National.

"Yeah, ol' Charlie blazed the trail for the black guys," added a veteran of many Masters as a competitor.

The subject of this conversation — ol' Charlie Sifford — was some 800 miles away from the excitement of the 39th Masters golf tournament, agreeing that fate had not been kind to him.

"I am happy for Lee, I hope he plays well, and finishes in the top 24 so he can play again next year," Sifford, pro at the Sleepy Hollow Golf and Country Club in Cleveland, said in a telephone interview.

"I feel bad because I never got to play in the Masters," he said. "I deserved it. They knew I deserved it. I never got a fair shake."

Sifford, now 51, forged the first major break in the color barrier on the U.S. golf tour. For years he was the man marked to be the first black to play in the Masters. But his number never was called.

Lee Elder tees off Thursday as the first black challenger in the tournament which was first played in 1934.

Sifford first helped eradicate the Professional Golfers' Association "Caucasian rule" and then, largely through pure grit and perseverence, proved a black man could make it on the tour.

Sifford turned pro in 1949 and joined the tour in 1959. But in his early years he found he could only play half the tour. He was barred in such places as Memphis, New Orleans and Atlanta.

Going his way alone, Sifford placed among the top 60 in money winnings for 10 years, beginning in 1960. He won the Hartford Open in 1967, the Los Angeles Open in 1969 and a secondary tour event at Sea Pines, N.C., in 1971.

But it was not until later that the Masters' procedure was changed so that any tour winner would be automatically qualified. Elder won the Monsanto Open at Pensacola, Fla., last year.

"The past champions could have picked me," Sifford said, referring to the privilege of previous green jacket winners to nominate a player for the field.

"They never did," he added. "Guys like Ben Hogan, Jimmy Demaret, Bill Casper, Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus. I had a clean record. But they never gave me a chance. In a way, I blame them, too."

jim crerar

The end of the caretakers' strike means that coach Ron Bowker, a teaching aid, can once again get into the building.

While the strike was on, Bowker worked outside the school with many of his top athletes but was unable to do much recruiting to beef up the team for the All-School Relays at Esquimalt May 6, 7 and 8 and the Victoria and District meet May 12-15.

"It's looking a lot better," Bowker agreed Tuesday.

Esquimalt finished third behind champion Mt. Douglas and Claremont last year in the city and on the Island, and last fall placed first overall in the B.C. high school cross-country championships, the girls winning and the boys coming fifth.

Sharon Young spearheads Esquimalt in the girls' 800 and 1,500 metres. Last spring, Sharon was a seventh-place finalist in B.C. over 1,500 and a semi-finalist over 800. Joining her in both events this year is team-mate Sharon Doherty, who was injured and missed the track season last year. Both can also run the 400 metres. Main threats are Ulla Hansen of Mount Doug and Julie Rainey of Belmont.

Esquimalt also has hopes in girls' sprints and relays with Cheryl Matthews and Carol Pickard expected to compete in events from 100 to 800 metres.

Betty Lewis, third on the Island last year in the shot put, is back and will also try her hand at the discus and javelin.

The major loss at Esquimalt is Karen Egger, city high school champion in the high and long jumps and hurdles last spring.

"We don't have too many guys who'll win events," Bowker said, "but our boys' team has lots of depth."

Nevertheless, he rates Gavin Smart a good bet to win at 400 metres and he'll also run the 200. Basketball star Ben Shotton will carry the colors in the shot put and javelin and run relays while Dave Carey, an "A" flight hurdler last year, is looking forward to an even better season this time. The same applies to Bruce Miller in the high jump and 400.

Bob Noble is the best distance prospect at the school. He placed nine in the B.C. cross-country last fall and will run the 800, 1,500, 3,000 and possibly steeplechase. The favorite at 800 and 1,500 metres, of course, is Mount Doug's Tom Griffin.

Debbie Gets an A Rating

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of Game Plan international card athletes rose to 91 Tuesday with the release of 1974 track and field ratings that include four A-card and seven international B-card competitors.

The 1974 total of 91 world-ranked athletes compares with 57 in 1973.

Under the Game Plan athlete classification system, A-card holders rank one to eight in the world in their sport, and B-card athletes are rated nine to 16.

The track and field listing is:

B-card athletes — John Beers, Merritt, B.C., Hugh Fraser, Ottawa, Claude Montminy, Cap de la Madeleine, Que., Yvonne Saunders, Guelph, Ont., Dan Shaughnessy, Toronto, Bruce Simpson, Ottawa, and Thelma Wright, Vancouver.

Game Plan is a co-operative effort of the federal government, the provinces, the Canadian Olympic Association and Olympic Trust to increase the degree of Canadian excellence in international sport.

PITCHING ACE BACK ON MOUND

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Fastball League has revoked a one-year suspension of star pitcher Peter Landers.

Pat O'Day, league publicity director, said the seven league governors who voted to suspend Landers last month lifted the suspension after an appeal by lawyer Terry Kelly of Oshawa, acting on behalf of the pitcher.

Landers was suspended for signing a contract with Oshawa Tonys while he was the property of Hamilton Waxmen.

O'Day said lifting the suspension does not alter Landers' playing rights, traded to Hamilton last March by Toronto Globals.

Weekend Start For Net Event

Players Keep Ref Occupied

LONDON (Reuter) — Three players were sent off and four others booked during an English League Third Division soccer match between Grimsby and Crystal Palance Tuesday night.

Referee John John Hough sent off Jim Cannon and Alan Whittle of Crystal Palance and Mich Czuczman of Grimsby following a flareup in the 70th minute.

Palace, fourth in the standings were beaten 2-1 and lost a chance of making up ground on the leaders.

Plymouth Argyle, who won 2-0 at Huddersfield, took over the Third Division lead from Blackburn Rovers.

Arsenal, in the First Division relegation zone, eased its worries with a 2-0 home win over Coventry City. Both goals were scored by Brian Kidd.

In Division II, Norwich City moved from fifth to third with a 1-0 away victory over Sheffield Wednesday.

Several of the matches were played in snow blizzards.

Pistons Stalled in Opener By Sonics' Super Defence

By The Associated Press

The home-court advantage helps in the National Basketball Association. But it doesn't hurt to have a good defence, either.

Houston Rockets and Seattle SuperSonics had both Tuesday night, and as a result have a 1-0 lead in their best-of-three opening-round playoff series.

"I'd have to give credit to their defence," said New York coach Red Holzman after the Knicks dropped a 99-84 decision to the Rockets in their Eastern Conference opener. "They really played well, plus the fact that we shot poorly.

It resulted in a 90-77 rout of the Detroit Pistons in their Western Conference opener. Tom Burleson held Detroit's Bob Lanier to a sub-par 15 points while scoring 19 himself.

In Tuesday's only American Basketball Association game, Kentucky Colonels beat Memphis Sounds 119-105 to take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven quarter-final.

Along with Houston's glittering defence, the youthful Rockets used 22 points by Calvin Murphy to whip the Knicks. The Rockets, in the playoffs for the first time ever, moved to a seven-point halftime lead, 46-39, by outscoring the Knicks 8-0 over the final 2:27 of the second quarter and Houston never trailed again.

Fred Brown came off the bench to pop in 23 points for Seattle. Seattle, which led from the opening minute, held off an early fourth quarter Detroit rally to win.

Russians 'Awesome'

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — Russia's hockey machine defeated Czechoslovakia, 5-2, Tuesday, taking a major step in a bid for its 14th world amateur hockey title.

In an exciting match of the co-favorites, highlighting the first round of the Group A tournament, Russia, the defending champion, outskated their rivals in the second and third periods displaying an awesome offensive assault.

Alexander Yakushev led the Russians with two second-period goals, his sixth and seventh of the tournament and took over the lead in the individual goal-scoring race.

Sergie Kapustin, Boris Petrov and Valery Kharlamov also tallied for Russia. Boruslav Statstny gave Czechoslovakia a 1-0 lead in the first period and Jiri Holik scored the other goal.

Approximately 5000 exiled Czechs in the capacity crowd of 10,000 filling the Olympic Sports Hall signalled their disapproval of the Russian victory with a mighty chorus of whistles as the winning country's flag was raised in the post-game ceremonies.

The result was a major disappointment for the Czech team, which had beaten the Russians three times in a row in Prague to win the Izvestia Cup last month and was slightly favored to win here.

It was the fourth Russian victory in first-round competition, while the loss was the first for the Czechs after three straight wins.

The teams will meet again in Dusseldorf in the second round next Thursday.

In another game Tuesday, a goal by Mats Ahlberg in the third period gave Sweden a 1-0 win over Finland before more than 8000 fans.

Victory boosted Sweden in to second place, while Finland is fourth with a 2-2 record, United States and Poland are both 0-4.

Sweden has six points after four games, the same as Czechoslovakia but is awarded second place on the basis of goals-for-and-against average.

Pincay Retains Jockey Crown

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — Move Abroad staged a front-running victory Tuesday to capture the $33,000 Santa Ana Handicap for fillies and mares, the closing day feature of the highly-successful Santa Anita meeting.

Despite finishing last in the field of six with Belle Marie, Laffit Pincay Jr., captured his sixth straight riding championship when he took the second and third races to give him a lead of five winners over Bill Shoemaker.

Pincay missed most of the month of March after suffering a broken collarbone. He returned to competition only last week.

For the first time in its 40-year history, Santa Anita passed the two million mark in attendance for a meeting and the wagering was up approximately nine per cent despite bad weather on several weekends.

In the closing day feature, jockey Sandy Hawley had Move Abroad on the lead by the time the horses passed the stands for the first time.

Going down the backstretch, Victorian Queen moved up to challenge the victor, but then was overtaken by the entry of Joli Vert and Bold Ballet, which finished second and third.

Racing moves to Hollywood Park with the $30,000-added Premier Handicap the feature of Friday's opening.

Manager Fired By West Brom

WEST BROMWICH, England (AP) — Don Howe has been fired as manager of the West Bromwich Albion soccer club. Howe had coached West Bromwich since 1972. The club slipped from the English Soccer League's first division to the second, and failed to earn promotion this year.

Raising Chlorine Up to MOT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four firms involved in the search for 340 tons of liquid chlorine gas dumped from a barge Feb. 19, said Tuesday they will turn over their findings to the ministry of transport.

The companies said in a news release they believe the tanks have been located at a depth of 785 feet after a search which covered 95 square miles in Malaspina Strait.

Specialized sonar and position fixing equipment was employed in the search as were television photography and videotape techniques.

The search began after the navy gave up a 30-day hunt for the tank cars in the strait between Squamish and Powell River.

The companies said the decision to raise or not to raise the chlorine containers remains with the MoT.

The four railway cars are worth up to $500,000, and the market price of the 340 tons of chlorine is worth between $85 and $100 a ton.

Both FMC Chemicals Ltd., owners of the cars, and Macmillan Bloedel Ltd., which owns the chlorine, have said they are not interested in financing salvage efforts.

An FMC spokesman said the salvage cost would be greater than the value of the rail cars and cargo.

Auto Hypester Mystery Deepens

DALLAS — The identity of a woman who claimed to have a car which would revolutionize the auto industry remains a mystery.

Police claim she is a "he," but the Federal Bureau of Investigation says his and her fingerprints don't match.

She is Elizabeth Carmichael, president of Twentieth Century Motor Car Corp. who is wanted here on charges of conspiracy to commit theft in promoting a three-wheeled car, the Revette.

The company's operations in Dallas were shut down in February, only a week after it moved here from California, when the specialized crime unit of the Dallas police department filed charges against 10 corporate officers.

Charges against all but Mrs. Carmichael and one other corporate officer were later dropped.

Capt. John Driscoll, head of the police intelligence section, said Tuesday that Mrs. Carmichael, a tall, husky-voiced individual who claimed to be a 37-year-old widow with five adopted children, is really Jerry Dean Michael, a fugitive for the last 13 years.

The FBI said later, however, that Michael's fingerprints did not match those on documents handled by Mrs. Carmichael. "As far as we are concerned, they are not the same person," the spokesman said.

A city investigator who checked Mrs. Carmichael's records here and those of Michael in Indiana, where the fugitive lived at one time, said:

"I don't want to argue that. But no one has known fingerprints of Mrs. Carmichael. She has never been fingerprinted. The FBI has documents they think Mrs. Carmichael handled."

Driscoll said his department had not used fingerprints to confirm the identity.

"I cannot reveal the details. But I am very comfortable with it (the identification). I am comfortable enough to continue the investigation along the same line . . . that Mrs. Carmichael and Michael are the same person."

HIS 'N' HERS PRISON TERMS

SAN DIEGO — Herbert and Mary Walters decided after conferring for six hours that she should serve her six months in jail first and he would go to jail afterwards. Judge Howard Turrentine gave each six monthe prison sentences after Walters pleaded guilty to aiding in the preparation of a false 1971 income tax return and Mrs. Walters to a charge of knowingly signing a false return.

Mamie

FT. GORDON, Ga. — Tentative plans have been made to move former U.S. first lady Mamie Eisenhower to Walter Reed Army hospital near Washington next Monday so she can be closer home while recovering from an intestinal ailment. The widow of Dwight Eisenhower was admitted to the U.S. Army Medical Centre at Ft. Gordon March 25 with an intestinal bleeding condition.

DENVER — Guru Maharaj Ji has left for India in an attempt to wrest control of the Divine Light mission from his relatives and consolidate his position as "Perfect master" of six million followers. Earlier this month in New Delhi, the guru's mother disowned her son because of his "despicable, nonspiritual way of life."

Sinatra

TORONTO — Tight security will be in effect when singer Frank Sinatra performs at two concerts May 10 before about 38,000 fans at Maple Leaf Gardens, says a Gardens official. Sinatra will be screened from admirers by 200 Gardens ushers, 100 uniformed Metropolitan Toronto police outside the building and a special detail of 24 off-duty policemen who will serve as personal security guards at $10.25 an hour each.

DENVER — A robber pulled a gun, made the teenage clerk at the doughnut shop give him $25, and then abducted her. Not far from the doughnut shop the outlaw put his gun in his pocket and tried to kiss his captive, 17-year-old Vicki Van Male. She reached into the man's pocket, slipped out the gun, and fired, shooting the robber in the chest. She escaped unharmed, and he was taken to hospital.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark. — Julian Bond was too young to run for national office when his name was offered as a vice-presidential choice at the 1968 Democratic convention. Next Jan. 14 he will be 35, old enough to run for president, and he already has set his criteria for a running mate.

"I would like a white woman from the northwest," Bond told students at Henderson State University. "She needs to be Catholic, married to a Jewish oriental who speaks Spanish."

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Band leader Skitch Henderson surrendered at a federal prison camp Tuesday to begin a six-month term for filing false income tax returns. Henderson, 57, will serve his term at the minimum security Allenwood federal penitentiary in central Pennsylvania.

Right Place, Wrong Time

PHILADELPHIA — A would-be robber handed a bank teller a note Tuesday she couldn't read, so he announced: "I am a bank robber." Donald d'Ambrosio, standing next to him announced: "I am a policeman."

Result—one arrest.

Road Deaths Rise Again In U.S.

CHICAGO (AP) — Traffic fatalities in the U.S., which declined 17 per cent in 1974, are climbing again as many drivers return to patterns that prevailed before last year's gasoline shortages.

National Safety Council statistics for the first two months of this year show a six-per-cent increase in traffic fatalities over 1974. January marked the first monthly increase from the previous year since October, 1973.

There was a 25-per-cent decline in the fatality rate from January to May, 1974, during the gasoline shortage, as motorists drove less frequently and slower.

The council had predicted that the 1975 traffic fatality toll would be a little higher than the 46,200 persons killed in 1974. With the most recent statistics, however, that projection may be increased.

Ottawa Denies Taps on LD Calls

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Is a government agency monitoring long distance telephone calls placed in Canada to points in the country and outside.

A qualified "No" answer to that question aroused a storm of protest from Opposition benches in the Commons Tuesday.

Joe Clark (PC-Rocky Mountain) raised the issue because of a reply he had received from Prime Minister Trudeau in the House last month.

He said he was also concerned because of a statement made in committee by Science and Technology Minister C. M. Drury to the effect that the communications branch of the National Research Council — as it was then — "monitors Hertzian wave emanations."

Clark said the phrase could include microwave emanations, including long distance telephone calls.

He asked the minister to tell the House whether that agency was, or is now, monitoring long distance telephone calls placed in Canada to points in Canada or elsewhere?

Drury said "I think my statement that Hertzian waves were alone being monitored covers the case of most telephone calls and excludes them by definition."

Clark said he did not understand the reply.

He repeated the question and said a simple "yes" or "no" would be fine. He would prefer not to have both, he added.

"I would make that, on choice, a simple 'no'," Drury replied.

Immediately Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon) rose on a question of privilege.

The Yukon member said he had been asking questions about wire tapping during several of the nine parliaments in which he has served.

"I have asked precisely the sort of question put by my friend for Rocky Mountain. But the prime minister has said it was not in the national interest to answer such a question. Is the prime minister now prepared to answer the question more fully and accurately than he did last year?" asked Mr. Nielsen.

Trudeau said as he recalled it the question was not the same. He said the member asked a question about calls within Canada.

"No, no," protested Mr. Clark. "You were not listening.

There was an uproar that only died down when Speaker James Jerome said the question had been dealt with and terminated discussion.

'An Insult To North'

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill proposing appointment of senators from the Yukon and Northwest Territories is "an insult to the north," long-time Senate opponent Stanley Knowles said Tuesday.

"I don't want to insult the north ... by proposing to them that they will be a part of the mainstream of Canadian life because a couple of Liberals get appointed to the Senate," Knowles said.

He favored a bill, passed earlier by parliament, giving the Northwest Territories two seats in the Commons.

"This is where the action is, this is where representation really counts," he said.

MPs Break Ranks On Pay-Hike Bill

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Party ranks were broken Tuesday as the Commons resumed debate on the government's quarrelsome bill to increase the pay of MPs and senators.

Charles Caccia, deputy government whip, spoke against the proposed 33 1-3 per-cent increase which would raise the annual pay and tax-free allowance of MPs to $36,000 — $26,000 in salary, $10,600 in expenses.

But two New Democrat MPs announced their support after their parliamentary leader, Ed Broadbent, had outlined the party's opposition.

Caccia, whose job as deputy government whip includes rounding up Liberal members to vote along party lines, said he disagrees with the approach and the timing of the bill.

MP's salaries should be studied by an independent commission and any pay increase approved now should not take effect until the next federal election, expected in 1978, he said.

"This bill was produced here internally with very little, if any, consultation with the outside world," Caccia said.

"It is no surprise that the public was rather dismayed and that a certain degree of resentment developed."

John Gilbert (NDP — Toronto Broadview) and Stuart Leggatt (NDP — New Westminster) both called for immediate passage of the raises.

Leggatt said the proposed increases are "long overdue and well justified." Mr. Gilbert said, however, that he "would be quite happy with $30,000 a year plus a cost-of-living allowance."

In addition to the immediate increase in salaries and allowances, the government proposes tying the salaries to the industrial wage index, which presumably would provide automatic annual increases.

Mark MacGuigan (L — Windsor-Walkerville) said higher salaries for MPs would safeguard the public interest in addition to providing fair pay for parliamentarians.

The indexing plan was introduced before Christmas when the government, faced with a public outcry, backed down from its original proposal for a straight 50-per-cent increase.

Broadbent has said the wage index would provide for higher salaries by 1978 than the original proposal.

He also criticized the Progressive Conservatives, asking "what they would have said if some other sectors of the economy had raised their salaries by 50 per cent."

MPs now earn $18,000 plus $8,000 in tax-free expenses. Senators now earn $22,000 a year, including $4,000 in tax-free expenses.

Defence Budgets Barely Keep Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Figures released by the defence department show that armed forces' budgets for the last 12 years have just barely kept pace with inflation.

—The 1963-64 military expenditures were about $1.7 billion. That was a year of unusually heavy expenditure. The following year the figure was about $1.5 billion.

The 1974-75 expenditures, expressed in dollars that ignore the effects of inflation over the last 12 years, also would be $1.5 billion. The budgets in the intervening years were in the same range.

Much has happened to the forces in those 12 years and the figures show that the government has used savings from heavy personnel cuts, integration of the three services and base reduction to pay for increasingly costly military equipment.

In 1963-64 there were more than 123,000 in the three services. Today there are about 78,000 in the unified force.

In 1968-69 when integration came into effect there were 101,600 personnel. In that year expenditure figures were about the same as in 1974-75 when the effects of inflation are deducted.

The following year, when the then defence minister Leo Cadieux said personnel would be allowed to fall to 83,000 there were about 90,000 servicemen.

The forces reached 83,000 personnel under Defence Minister James Richardson who now has allowed them to fall to their present level.

Housing Action Demanded

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition housing critics demanded Tuesday that the government take further steps to deal with the housing slump.

They were reacting to Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. figures showing that housing production in March was about half what it was last year at the same time.

A CMHC official said the low production rate raises questions about chances of reaching the government's minimum target of 210,000 starts this year.

John Gilbert, housing critic for the New Democratic Party, said the CMHC figures indicate the "failure of the government programs to cope with the housing crisis."

"I would hope that the government will take active measures to deal with it."

The latest information on

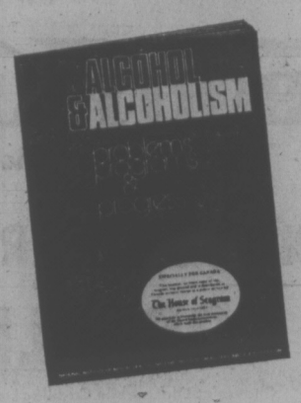
can be yours, free of charge

We have an important booklet which we think will interest you. And it's free of charge. It's all about the disease of alcoholism. Experts tell us that it's one of the finest things ever written on the subject. Its 42 pages are written in simple terms that we can all clearly grasp.

It's a booklet for everyone, even those who have no problem with alcoholism and just want to learn something about the disease. It's also written for those who, through no fault of their own, may be alcoholics and are unable to control the amount or extent of their drinking. Anybody with a friend or relative with this serious health problem will also find this booklet valuable.

The booklet firmly establishes that alcoholism is a disease and not a behavioural defect or moral weakness; that the problem is not one of drinking but of drunkenness and not of alcohol but of alcoholism. It recognizes that the cause or causes of alcoholism are not yet known and that as of now there is no known cure for the disease, even though it is often treated successfully and its progress halted.



That was in 1934 and we have continued ever since. The distribution of this booklet is another step in our continuing program directed toward increasing public knowledge of a serious social and health problem.

"Alcohol & Alcoholism — Problems, Programs & Progress" was written by the National Institute of Mental Health and the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, both of the United States. It was published under the auspices of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare and was printed originally by the U.S. Government Printing Office.

SUBJECTS COVERED

This readable and informative booklet covers a broad spectrum of subjects. It pursues such subjects as understanding alcohol and its effects, problem drinking and alcoholism, the origins of alcoholism, overcoming alcoholism: diagnosis, treatment and prevention; legislation; organization and action and other related subjects.

PART OF A CONTINUING PROGRAM

So far, we have received thousands of letters commending this project. These are gratifying, especially the large numbers from school boards and teachers across the country requesting extra copies. We have also received hundreds of letters of approval from medical doctors and other scientists, and from medical schools, alcoholism commissions and professional associations.

As many Canadians know, our Company was first in our Industry to advocate moderation in its advertising.

ON DEPRESSION BRINK: CLC CHIEF

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the Canadian Labor Congress said Tuesday the latest unemployment figures indicate Canada is on the brink of depression.

Joe Morris of Ottawa said unemployment already has reached depression levels in the Atlantic provinces, particularly in Newfoundland where it is 18.8 per cent.

Morris, here to speak to the biennial convention of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, called for immediate government action to halt unemployment.

There should be stimulation of consumer purchasing power with further tax reductions as well as a minimum increase of $50 a month for old age pensioners, he said.

"Prompt development of more labor-intensive, secondary-tertiary industries to develop our resources will enable this country to create jobs that will have a lasting effect on efforts to achieve full employment in Canada," he added.

Cash Discounts Seen as Certain

Canada is heading for a two-price system for merchandise because of the increasing reliance upon credit buying, C. A. Hayles of Toronto, Imperial Oil assistant general manager for marketing, said in Victoria Tuesday. (See also Page 24 for pledged B.C. legislation.)

"Consumers are beginning to demand a discount for paying cash for their purchases," he said in an interview.

Hayles predicted that within two or three years credit card companies would be under tremendous pressure to remove the clause in their contracts which require companies to sell at one price whether by cash or credit.

Once that happens, a two-price system will go into effect.

Hayles said he would personally favor a two-price system for gasoline sales.

He said 50 per cent of Imperial's gasoline sales are by way of credit card in Canada. (And British Columbians used credit cards for gas to a greater extent than most Canadians.)

"There should be a discount, a small discount, for buying gasoline by cash instead of credit," he said.

The use of credit adds four cents to the cost of a gallon of gasoline, he said. Because half the total volume of gas is sold by credit, the average cost of credit is about two cents a gallon at the present time, he said.

The growth of credit buying is of great concern to the gasoline industry, he said, because of the cost factor and the great competition from self-serve stations and cut-rate brands.

(In Victoria, an experiment in credit buying of food by the Warehouse chain was ended, in part, because customers paying cash were requesting a discount on their bills.)

Hayles said because of cost factors such as credit, the company was moving into self serve outlets "like a Prairie fire."

For example, there are 11 self-service stations in B.C. at the present time but before year's end an additional 14 will open.

In Victoria there is only one Imperial self-serve but two more will be added this year and one more in 1976.

Of the 14 new self-serves, 10 will be leased out to dealers while four will be operated directly by the company. In Victoria, both new self serves opening this year will be leased to dealers. One is opening at Shelbourne and Mackenzie where the Esso station will be both service and self-serve. A completely self-serve station will open this year at a site purchased from Home Oil at Fairfield and Cook.

Hayles said self-serves were the fastest growing segment of the gasoline industry but many of the new stations would be leased to private dealers rather than being run directly by the company. Meanwhile, the expansion of the discount Econo gas stations has been halted. There are 13 in B.C. but no new ones are planned.

Of the 6,000 Esso stations in Canada, only 200 are run directly by the company, Hayles said, and this number was not likely to increase. However, some full service stations run by the company would be converting to self-serve bars.

The trend is to retain one bay of full service pumps in new stations that are basically self-serve outlets.

The demise of some full service outlets should not worry motorists because at the present time in B.C. there are twice as many full service pumps as are needed, Hayles said.

Oil companies in past have overexpanded for competitive reasons, he said.

Gulf Cutting Involvement

Gulf Oil of Canada has announced it will limit itself to direct control of less than 15 per cent of its 1,500 outlets in Canada.

It will expand its self-serve operations but turn them over to dealers. In the Victoria area three of the 23 Gulf stations are run directly by the company.

Gulf has two self serve outlets in this area but one will be turned over to a dealer in May.

Tel Workers Accept Pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 10,000 employees of British Columbia Telephone, members of the Federation of Telephone Workers of B.C., have accepted the terms of a new agreement recommended by federal labor commissioner Hugh Ladner.

Latest to agree to the terms were 7,500 workers in the traffic and plant divisions of B.C. Tel. The 2,500 clerical division employees voted approval Friday.

Company spokesman Colin Patterson said company officials will meet union officials later this week to iron out details for signing the new agreement.

Ladner recommended an 18.5-per-cent increase, retroactive to Jan. 1, with another 14-per-cent increase Next Jan. 1, plus improved fringe benefits.

NDP Tax Act Ad Said Deceiving

A provincial government advertisement is deceiving the public and Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young should resign if the ad continues to run, a Liberal MLA shouted in the legislature Tuesday.

Garde Gardom (L-Vancouver-Point Grey) said an ad for the Real Property Tax Deferment Act says the interest on deferred taxes will be "a modest 8 per cent" when in fact the interest is compounded yearly.

If an elderly or handicapped citizen deferred $1,000 in taxes under the legislation, said Gardom, in 10 years he would have to pay back $1,800 under simple interest and $2,160 under compounded interest.

But Gardom's efforts to get Young to explain why she hasn't taken action on the ad for being misleading and deceptive ran into trouble from the house committee chairman Hartley Dent (NDP-Skeena).

Dent ruled that the matter should properly be discussed under the finance department and he told Gardom he could not discuss the issue any further.

Liberal leader David Anderson finally challenged the ruling but on a 25-11 vote, the government supported Dent and the matter was dropped.

Young insisted she could not handle the problem anyway because her jurisdiction is clearly defined under the Trades Practices Act and she is empowered to act only in areas where a consumer deals with a supplier in a retail matter.

She accused the Liberal of trying to use the Trade Practices Act for political purposes.

Gardom said creation of a consumer services department was a needless exercise by the NDP government and the department's activities could have been adequately handled by a special branch in the attorney-general's department.

"The consumer affairs department fails to prevent misleading advertising by the government, along with advertising in the private sector," said Gardom. "It's a double standard and I don't think it's playing ball with the people to go ahead on that basis."

Earlier Socred MLA Don Phillips urged that government protection for consumers in B.C. is especially needed because government is moving into the realm of business.

Phillips said the provincial government "is the greatest rip-off artist known to man today and a consumer services department pamphlet mailed to B.C. households should have warned consumers about inherent defects in the government operations.

"I would have had a cartoon in the brochure with Premier Barrett with bags of money behind his back . . . to truly depict what big government is doing to taxpayers today," said Phillips.

"If the minister is truly concerned for consumers she should be taking a stand on the increasing taxes which leave very little revenue for the purchase of goods."

If Phillips had been granted the cartoon licence for the brochures, he would also have sprinkled the publications with illustrations of cabinet ministers stumbling over untold numbers of civil servants, contributing to increased operational costs.

That cost, he said, is the greatest contributor to inflation today, not the high cost of food.

Phillips also criticized the minister for allowing the brochure to single out encyclopedia salesmen in a warning to consumers, but Young countered that she hadn't had a single complaint from the encyclopedia salesmen for their mention in the pamphlet.

The department should lobby for consumer representation on the government's new natural products marketing superboard, set up to investigate commodity marketing, said Phillips.

The B.C. Egg Marketing Board, he said, in particular has exploited the consumer beyond endurance and has lost its credibility in the eyes of the public.

The minister said the pamphlet was necessary to advise consumers to their new rights under the Trade Practices Act.

Responding to criticism that government departments were not scrutinized by consumer services the minister said all complaints, even those directed at the government, are processed equally.

"It's just the same for all. If a government department is in the wrong it gets its knuckles rapped." She said there had been a few examples of government department oversights, but declined to specify.

ADEQUATE JAR LIDS FORECAST

An adequate supply of canning jar lids will be available to B.C. consumers this season if there is no hoarding, Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young said Tuesday.

The shortage, which irritated canning enthusiasts last season, was due to the shortsightedness of a "bunch of thick-headed men" Young told the legislature, sparking harrumphs from the male opposition members.

Ms. Young said canning lid retailers were a "timid lot" who refused to order extra lids for fear that the market would be over-supplied.

The consumer services department she said, started to work on the situation last fall and an eastern supplier of the wide-mouthed lids, Bernardin Co. Ltd. in Quebec has agreed to supply the province all summer long.

Western states experienced a similar shortage of lids, she said.

Contract Changes Planned

Amendments to the Consumer Protection Act to clamp down on businesses failing to live up to prepaid contracts will definitely be introduced in the legislature this session, Consumer Affairs Minister Phyllis Young said Tuesday.

The provincial government has forced four firms to open their books during the last year so creditors could find out where their down-payments disappeared to, Ms. Young told the legislature.

"We got the word on these companies and found out they were still accepting money although they had failed to live up to contracts and clients' down-payments were lost," she said.

Complaints against a Burnaby meat company aired in the House by Socred MLA Jim Chabot, prompted Ms. Young's statement.

Chabot (Columbia River) said four of his constituents lost down payments totalling $1,200 when Budget Freezer Foods Processing "bilked people out of their money."

The consumers, which he declined to name, made down payments, signed a contract and deliveries never materialized, he said.

"They had no intention of fulfilling their contract and had the gall to contact the four people to secure the balance of payment although deliveries weren't made."

"I want to make sure this operation never gets in business in B.C. again," said Chabot.

Young said her department "is on top of the situation," and is meeting with principles in the firm. Due to a section of the Trade Practices Act, however, she said she is not at liberty to discuss the matter further.

"We don't allow companies to continue operations as soon as we become aware there is a problem," said Young. "We advise that the company refrain from taking any more money from the consumers."

Chabot said he finds it difficult to understand how a firm can declare bankruptcy when they have little or no overhead. He suggested provincial legislation be introduced which would require bonding.

POWDER LAW

Federal authorities have issued new regulations for dental powders which were found to burst into flames on contact with damp cloths, Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young announced Tuesday.

Ansodent and Orthodent producers have been told by the Hazard Products branch of the federal government to use child-proof caps from now on and to lower the level of sodium peroxide in their product, said Young.

The minister requested an investigation of the two products in December when she learned that several small fires in B.C. had been caused when the powders came in contact with a small amount of moisture.

Cash Discount Act Pledged

YOUNG
. . . Ottawa 'slow'

The provincial government will take action if the federal government doesn't move to allow discounts for consumers who forego use of credit cards and pay cash.

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young said Tuesday that the federal government has promised legislation which would allow merchants to offer cash paying customers a discount in price, a practice currently prohibited by credit card company contracts.

"But the federal government is slow as usual," said Young. "The action is better taken at the federal level, but we may have to wait three years at this rate, and if they don't act we will."

The subject was introduced during debate on the consumer services department estimates by Liberal MLA Gordon Gibson (North Vancouver Capilano).

Gibson said contracts between Canadian merchants and credit card companies have a prohibitive clause which prevents a discount for cash customers, whereas American merchants aren't bound by the clause.

"What's fair for one country should be fair in another," said Gibson.

He also criticized an alarming increase in the use of credit cards for payment of groceries in chain food stores.

Retailers, he said pay five per cent for use of credit cards, which is inevitably tacked on to the price of consumer goods and also creates an inequitable position for smaller food stores.

Ms. Young said she has asked grocery store chains to refrain from the policy of accepting credit card payment for food.

The minister also indicated that legislation, probably next session, will be introduced to regulate and protect consumers who purchase used cars.

Noting that most complaints forwarded to her department deal with unsatisfied used car customers, she said legislation similar to that in Australia is being considered.

Used cars under that country's regulations are guaranteed for a certain length of time and dealers advise customers of mechanical defects in the car and cost of repairs.

NDP Eager for Bows on Jobless Drop

NDP backbencher Rosemary Brown (Vancouver-Burrard) drew great laughter from the opposition in the legislature when she stood in question period to ask Labor Minister Bill King an obviously "planted" question about unemployment figures.

"Would the minister of labor explain," she asked, "why unemployment in Canada is going up while in B.C. it is going down?"

Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk tried to take the floor to answer the question but King quickly said there are two reasons for the drop in B.C.

Firstly, he said, the government's direct employment programs have been designed to ease the employment situaiton and, secondly, the business community has great confidence in the government of B.C.

Statictics Canada released figures Tuesday showing unemployment across Canada rose from 6.8 per cent in February to 7.2 per cent in March.

B.C. and Manitoba were the only provinces to show a decline. The March unemployment rate in B.C. was 8.4 per cent, down from 8.5 in February.

King said he did not know exactly how many people in B.C. are unemployed but said it is much below the 100,000 figure mentioned by the Social Credit opposition.

He also said the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate is well below 8.4 per cent in B.C.

Liberal Gordon Gibson (North Vancouver (Capilano) angrily shouted back: "If you were unemployed would you like to be adjusted or unadjusted."

NO CROWN CORP. EYED

Mines Minister Leo Nimsick told the legislature Tuesday it is not government policy to set up a Crown corporation for mineral exploration and development.

Liberal MLA Gordon Gibson (L — North Vancouver - Capilano) questioned the minister because he said he had heard a mines department official had told students at the B.C. Institute of Technology such a Crown corporation is planned.

The official also apparently told students the government would amend the Prospectors Assistance Act to give the government exclusive rights to any discoveries made by prospectors receiving assistance.

But Nimsick said neither statement represents government policy and, to his knowledge, no official of his department was giving out that information.

Under the Prospectors' Assistance Act the government now has first refusal on any prospectors' claims.

Gibson said later he could not name the official in question and he accepted Nimsick's reply.

Also during question period Tuesday, Highways Minister Graham Lea said his department has no plans to build a bridge between Saturna and Mayne Islands.

Saanich Socred MLA Hugh Curtis asked Lea about possible studies of a bridge link because he said he had heard persisent rumors to that effect.

Hydro Noted Critics

The B.C. Hydro board of directors under the Socred administration were apparently concerned about placing ads with news media which took editorial stands against Hydro policies, the legislature was told Tuesday.

Resources Minister Bob Williams, answering a question fro Liberal leader David Anderson, said the files of Hydro reveal that the awarding of advertising was a "matter of concern."

Anderson said outside the house he has information that efforts were made to prevent Hydro advertising with Vancouver radio station CKNW because a former employee, Jack Webster, criticized the Columbia River treaty.

Anderson said a newspaper may also have been involved in similar discrimination.

But the Liberal leader would not give any details of the information he has, saying he wants to bring up the matter in the legislature again in hopes of getting further information from Williams.

TRASK STATUS DRAWS BLANK

Economic Minister Gary Lauk Tuesday again refused to confirm whether B.C. Railway assistant general manager John Trask has tendered his resignation.

Questioned in the legislature by Social Credit opposition members Monday, Lauk said he could not confirm whether Trask has resigned. Tuesday he repeated that answer when asked again.

The minister did confirm that BCR chief engineer Ernie Wakely has resigned but would not disclose the details.

Talented Girl, 15, In Finals

Among nine young Canadian musicians chosen from 25 semi-finalists for the CBC Talent Festival finals to be held in Montreal this week, is the West Coast's Gwen Hoebig.

The 15-year-old North Vancouver girl, who has been studying during the last several months with Harry Cawood at Victoria Conservatory of Music, is one of two string players in the event.

Other categories are piano, winds and voice. In each category the finalists will be competing for $3,000 first and $1,500 second prizes.

At 11 she commenced study with Sydney Humphreys at Victoria Conservatory and when he left for Britain, she became a pupil of Steven Staryk in Vancouver, but returned to Victoria last fall.

CBC-AM Radio will broadcast the gala finals concert in which each finalist will perform with the CBC Talent Festival Orchestra, on Friday at 8:03 p.m. The concert will be repeated on the CBC-FM edition of Themes and Variations, April 23 at 7:03 p.m.

Candidates will also undergo recital finals and these will be broadcast on CBC-FM tonight from 6:30 to 9 p.m. and Thursday, 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Victoria Conservatory principal Robin Wood has flown to Montreal to act as pianist for Gwen Hoebig's recital.

Among the panel of adjudicators — three for each category — is Victoria resident composer-violinist Murray Adaskin.

Proper Pan Among Secrets To Turning Fine Omelets

TINY BENNETT

One of the greatest treasures of French cooking is the omelet — a simple dish of cooked eggs that is treated badly in far too many kitchens.

Its probable origin is China in the Egg Foo Yung dish but the French turned it into a culinary delight, nicely browned on the outside and moist perfection inside, with a range of seasonings and fillings almost beyond belief. No matter where one travels in France, no matter how small or scruffy the restaurant, there is one thing that you can be sure, that you will be served a really first-class omelet.

This dish is extremely inexpensive to prepare — a three egg omelet entree would cost about 25 cents to cook and serve at home. A meal of clear chicken soup, plain omelet with spinach, followed by fresh fruit provides a well-balanced meal quite low in calories and yet hearty and tastily satisfying.

Omlets are excellent when unexpected guests arrive, as I found once when I invited six friends back to share a roast beef dinner. When we arrived I discovered I had forgotten to switch on the pre-set timer on my oven and the beef was raw.

Luckily I always keep lots of eggs in the fridge, so I threw an omelet party instead, serving a good salad, garlic bread and two green vegetables with omelets cooked individually to each guests' preference. The meal was such a success, we have repeated it quite a few times.

One of the secrets to turn out great omelets lies in using the correct pan, a heavy metal unit that has been well seasoned and is kept strictly for omelets. Any good skillet with rounded sides is suitable but it really is worthwhile to buy a proper omelet pan such as professionals use. I have two such pans, very plain iron or steel with long white metal handles that never get hot. These I bought from a restaurant supply house many years ago at less than $2 for the two-egg omelet size and about $2.50 for the three-egg size.

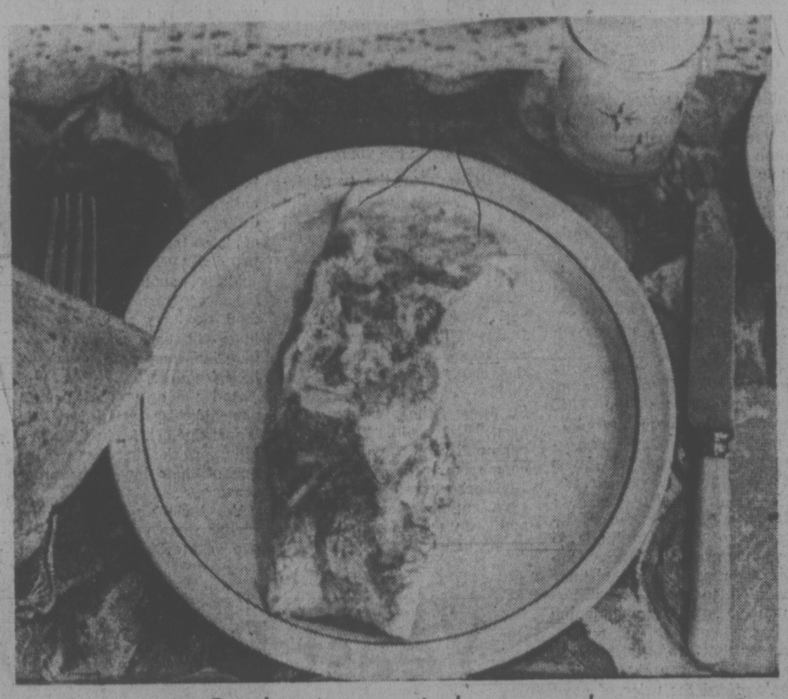
These pans come with a protective covering that must be removed with boiling water and a fair bit of elbow grease. When the interior is perfectly clean, it is then seasoned over high heat with a layer of oil poured in. I did mine three times before the food stopped sticking and the correct seasoning point was reached. All it takes to keep clean is a careful wipe out with kitchen paper. Neither pan has been washed in 10 years, on the inside that is, but any encrusted matter is cleaned off with coarse salt.

A Teflon coated pan of the correct shape can save this bother but there is such fine cooking control and even heat with the basic heavy true omelet pan that I recommend them above anything else.

PLAIN OMELET

For the best results, eggs used in an omelet should be removed in advance from the fridge and allowed to reach room temperature.

Since there is superior control in cooking smaller omelets, I believe it sensible to restrict size to either two or three eggs.



Omelet, inexpensively prepared

One can make individual omelets for each entree serving or split one three-egg omelet between two people for a fine breakfast dish served with grilled bacon or sausages.

Break the eggs into a bowl. For every two eggs, add one tablespoon of water, add salt to taste, a smidgin of white pepper and just a dash of Tabasco. Beat lightly with a wire whisk or a fork, but don't make them foam up as I believe this changes the character of the dish.

Pop one tablespoon of fresh butter into the pan, and getting this very hot, swirl it around until all the interior of the pan is coated. When the butter foams up, pour in the egg mixture.

At once, begin to shake the pan gently back and forth so that the egg spreads evenly across the entire surface. Keep this up until the omelet is finished.

When the edges become solid, lift up the cooked edge with a spatula, tilt the pan and allow the excess liquid to run down under this edge. Repeat this all the way around, carefully separating the outer edge with the spatula.

If your pan is correctly seasoned the omelet will separate from the pan and begin to slide back and forth as you shake it. Slide it back towards the handle, turn over the back edge onto the still moist centre, about one third covering the centre third and, after sliding it across to the opposite side, roll it out onto a warm plate so that it is folded into equal thirds with both edges underneath and a deliciously browned bottom and top. Run a small knob of butter over the top from the point of a knife and serve immediately.

To cook a second omelet, wipe out the pan with paper, bring back to full heat, add the butter and repeat the process. If the omelet sticks, it is because either the pan is not correctly seasoned or it was not hot enough when the mix was poured in.

Once you have mastered the plain omelet, you can use fillings such as mushrooms, fresh or dried herbs, grated cheese, sauteed onion and-or tomato, smoked salmon, finely minced poached kipper, finnan haddie, crisp bacon bits or cooked spinach, finely chopped and with a little butter added.

When I make an omelet with a filling, I take a little of the filling, chop it very fine and mix with the eggs at the beating stage. Then, when the omelet is nice and moist in the centre, I spread the rest of the filling on and fold as previously mentioned.

If there is any great secret in turning out a superb omelet, I'd suggest it lies in using the best possible pan brought up to the proper high heat level.

You may break them at first, may have them stick or have them roll right out of shape turning them out onto a plate but they will still be very good to eat and practice will eventually allow you to serve a perfectly cooked omelet as beautiful as any cooked by a chef.

Chiang Burial Postponed

TAIPEI (UPI) — Taiwan will hold a state funeral April 16 for Generalissimo Chaign Kai-shek, but his burial will be indefinitely postponed until China "is recovered" so that he can be buried in the mainland that for 25 years he dreamed of recovering.

Chiang, the last of the Second World War allied leaders, died Saturday at the age of 87 without realizing his hopes of returning to the mainland from where he was driven by the Communists in 1949.

Grapefruit Dressing

3 tablespoons cornstarch
1-3 cup cold water
2 tablespoons paprika
2-3 cup boiling water
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup honey
1 tablespoon salt
¼ teaspoon onion powder
2¾ cups salad oil
¾ cup fresh squeezed grapefruit juice
¼ cup fresh squeezed lemon juice
3 tablespoons fresh grated grapefruit peel.

Blend together cornstarch and cold water until smooth. Dissolve paprika in boiling water; add cornstarch mixture. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Cook 4-5 minutes, until very thick. Remove from heat; add sugar, honey, salt and onion powder. Place in large mixer bowl. Add oil in small amounts alternately with grapefruit and lemon juice, mixing on medium speed. Add grapefruit peel; mix well. Store in refrigerator. Beautiful served in a cleaned our grapefruit shell. Serve over a colorful grapefruit and avocado salad.

Vegetarians Coming Out of Closets

By JUDY KLEMESRUD

NEW YORK — Not long ago, vegetarians were viewed by many people as weird, wiry crusaders for carrot juice who ran around in tennis shoes rather than wear back.

As a result, many vegetarians kept their eating habits to themselves. But nowadays, they are coming out of the closet, and they have some powerful supporters on their side, including Dr. Jean Mayer, the Harvard nutritionist whose column appears each week in the Victoria Times.

Vegetarianism, he said, is an idea "that has three things going for it all at once—economics, health and compassion."

According to interviews by New York Times correspondents across the U.S. more and more people—especially the young—are giving up "flesh foods" in favor of a vegetarian way of life.

There are various reasons: Many vegetarians abhor the thought of killing animals to feed themselves. Others cite health reasons, and their aversion to the various hormones, growth-inducing drugs, chemicals and preservatives that are often found in meat. Some say they simply can't afford the price of meat anymore, while others are members of religious groups such as the Seventh Day Adventists and Hare Krishna, whose members refrain from eating meat.

But perhaps the most popular reason for vegetarianism these days is the political-ecological argument that, for moral reasons, red meat eaters should sustain themselves lower on the world's threatened food chain. The "new vegetarians," as adherents to this theory call themselves, do not feel that it is morally right at the time of a world food crisis to eat red meat—especially when it takes seven to eight pounds of grain to produce one pound of beef.

It is an idea that is especially appealing to the young.

Helping spur the trend toward vegetarianism is the fact that prominent persons are more willing to talk publicly about their way of eating.

Bill Walton, the controversial rookie centre for the Portland Trail Blazers, makes no bones about his vegetarianism, and neither do Cloris Leachman and Susan St. James, the actresses; Pegeen Fitzgerald, the radio personality. Neal Walk, centre for the New York Knickerbockers; Lois Gould, the author; Dennis Weaver and James Coburn, the actors; Dick Gregory, the comedian; George Harrison, the former Beatle; Ravi Shankar, the sitar player; Yehudi Menuhin, the violinist and Will Durant, the author.

There are several signs that vegetarianism is on the rise in this country.

Vegetarian restaurants and natural food stores are now commonplace in most of the nation's larger cities and in many of its college and university towns.

Vegetarian dishes have been added to many college eating programs—at Oberlin College, an estimated 300 out of 2,600 students are eating primarily vegetarian food.

Many supermarkets now stock vegetarian and natural food products and most airlines will serve passengers vegetarian meals if given 24 hours' notice.

And the owners of the 55-year-old Vegetarian Hotel in Woodridge, N.Y., in the Catskills, are looking forward to one of their biggest summer seasons.

Vegetarians generally come in two main varieties: Lacto-ovo vegetarians, who will eat milk, cheese and eggs but no "flesh foods," and vegans, who exclude all animal products.

Is their way of eating healthy and safe? Doctors and nutritionists generally given an almost unqualified "yes" to lacto-ovo vegetarianism, but express some doubts about vegan diets.

"If they have to avoid flesh, I recommend the lacto-ovo style," said Dr. Philip White, director of the American Medical Association's department of foods and nutrition.

"If done carefully and well, a vegetarian diet is not harmful," he added. "After all, two-thirds of the world's population subsists on vegetarian diets."

Dr. Jean Mayer had one reservation about the lacto-ovo diet: "Eating too many eggs because of the huge amounts of cholesterol in their yolks may be bad for the adult man, but that's all," he said. (The American Heart Association advises eating no more than two or three eggs a week.)

Yeast Bread Making Remains Exciting

HILDA BEASTALL

Each year a fresh batch of homemakers is persuaded to make the first loaf of yeast bread or first dozen rolls or buns. These homemakers may be young people on their own or with families; or they are older fathers and mothers wanting more home produced food for the children; or they are the ambitious, active over-sixties, keen to have the excitement at last of making bread.

Exciting it is at first. From my point of view it has remained exciting for my few years of making bread. It is still a sort of special event that must be planned for, to get the more or less uninterrupted time to complete the process from the setting of the yeast to the removal of fragrant loaves or buns from the oven.

While many bread recipes can be found, the ones in this column today are of the easiest, requiring only one rising period because they are made from a beaten batter, and not kneaded.

The dough is soft, not suitable to handling for braids, twists, or other fancy shaping. But it is suited for round loaves made in casseroles, or in conventional small or large loaf pans. It makes small or large buns, or huge flat buns in 4½-inch (11cm.) foil pans.

All these products are fine eating for lunches taken to work or school, or slightly warmed when eating at home with salads, cheeses, soups or any other good foods. As gifts, nothing quite equals home-made bread or buns for pleasure in giving and appreciation in receiving.

Now for the first of the really easy and quick breads, an especially good wholewheat and soy mixture enriched with protein from non-instant skim milk powder.

QUICK BATTER BREAD

¼ cup warm water
1 tsp demerara sugar
1 tbsp granular yeast, or 1 pkt.
2 tbsp soy oil or soft margarine
1 Tbsp demerara sugar
1 tsp salt
1 cup (generous) hot water
one-third cup non-instant skim milk powder
1 egg (small is fine)
1½ cups wholewheat flour
1½ cups unbleached flour
¼ cup soy flour

Measure warm water into large mixing bowl. Add 1 teaspoon sugar, stir to melt. Sprinkle yeast on surface of water.

Let stand 10 minutes until dissolved and smooth on top.

Meanwhile put hot water into smaller bowl; add oil, sugar, salt and milk powder. Stir and beat to blend. When cooled to lukewarm, add to yeast mixture. Beat in the egg with wood spoon.

Measure out the flours and stir with a fork to mix. Do not sift. Add half the mixed flours to the yeast-liquid mixture, beating well with the wooden spoon. beat until smooth (about 2 minutes). Add remaining half and beat as well as possible, until fairly smooth and sticky.

Well grease the chosen bread or muffin pans, or foil pans.

Spoon in the batter to just over half the depth of any one of the pans. Smooth over with spoon.

Cover with warmed towel and set in warm place to rise at 30 to 35 degs. C. away from draught. A warming oven may be your best place, or on a shelf or table near a hot-water tank.

This rising will take about 1½ hours to reach approximately double height. Check after first half hour, but do not create a draught. If temperature is a little higher, the rising may take only one hour. If dough does rise too much over the pans, gently push it down with the spoon, and begin rising again.

Meanwhile heat oven to 190 degs. C. and when dough is well risen in pans, bake until bread is well browned and sounds hollow when tapped with knuckles. A loaf takes about 35 to 40 minutes; buns in small pans will cook in about 25 to 30 minutes.

Don't look in the oven for the first 15 minutes at least. If a draught of cool air strikes the still soft dough it will partially collapse. A slammed oven door has the same effect I believe but have never tried this. I must some day, just to be sure.

Turn out the baked bread and buns on wire racks at once to cool. This recipe makes two small loaves and eight medium buns in muffin pans. They are good hot or cold, fresh or several days old.

Just as easy and quick to make is a dark rye bread which is delightfully light textured with this recipe. This is also a Batter Bread, only one period of rising is needed, and the dough is soft.

DARK RYE BATTER BREAD

½ cup warm water
1 tsp demerara sugar
1 tbsp yeast or 1 pkt
1 cup hot water
1 tbsp soy oil or soft margarine
1 tsp dark molasses
1 tsp salt
½ cup powdered skim milk
1 cup dark rye flour
1¾ cups unbleached flour
¼ cup wheat germ

Into a large mixing bowl, measure the warm water. Add sugar and stir to dissolve. Sprinkle yeast on surface and leave for 10 minutes until dissolved and smooth on top.

Meanwhile in a smaller bowl, measure hot water. Add oil (or margarine), molasses, salt and milk powder. When this mixture is cooled to same temperature as yeast mixture, add to yeast mixture and beat together with wooden spoon.

Mix together the flours and wheat germ without sifting. Add one half of this flour mixture to the liquids, beating well with spoon until smooth, about 2 minutes. Add remainder of flour mixture, beating as well as possible until dough is fairly smooth and sticky.

Well grease a loaf pan, or small pans for buns or rolls.

Half fill the chosen pan or pans, and let rise in warm place 30 to 35 deg. C. for 45 to 60 minutes until doubled in bulk. Cover the pans with a warm towel and keep them out of draught.

Preheat oven to 177 deg. C. and bake for about 35 minutes for a small loaf, until top sounds hollow when tapped with knuckles. Turn out on wire racks to cool.

A note for beginners, these whole grain bread products keep well when wrapped and stored in refrigerator. At room or cool cupboard temperature, their fine flavor alters in a couple of days due to the whole grain ingredients. These two breads are so delicately textured and flavored as to be at their best when enjoyed warm or at least fresh.

Times Haven't Altered for Degraded Obese

By DR. JEAN MAYER

Hundreds of years ago, St. Jerome down-graded his obese contemporaries with a memorable one-liner: "A fat paunch never breeds fine thoughts."

In all fairness, he might better have been referring to the thoughts a paunch breeds in others, like Chesterfield's, "obesity and stupidity are such companions that they are considered synonymous."

Times have not changed for the obese among us. As one minority group after another escapes from discrimination, the obese remain fair game. Perhaps, it's because they are our most numerous minority group, although still unrecognized as such.

Discrimination in any form is bad enough when it is applied to an overweight adult. It has been shown, for example, that a fat job-hunter is less likely to reach high-pay, high-executive status than his thinner competitors.

But it is much worse when obese children and adolescents are the target. Some years ago, my colleagues and I were studying the relationship of physical activity to obesity in adolescent girls at a summer camp.

It was obvious, from this and other studies we had done in a suburban school system, that obese youngsters were less physically active than boys and girls who were not overly fat.

In an effort to try to find out just why, we gave these obese girls, along with a separate group of normal-weight girls, three types of psychological tests involving word association, sentence completion and describing a "picture story."

The obese girls responded to the word-association test with a larger number of words like diet, calories, reducing, fat, or overweight. And when it came to completing the sentences, they used a much larger number of passive words. For example, in completing "when I am feeling bad, I . . ." the obese girls would add something like "sleep" or "cry," whereas the slim girls might finish with, "work harder" or "visit friends."

Finally, in describing what they saw in a set of pictures, the obese girls described the boys or girls as passive. Things happened to them, rather than their doing things. They also saw themselves as rejected. A picture showed a girl walking toward a group of other girls. All non-obese youngsters saw her as doing this. The obese girls saw her as rejected by the rest, a view found to be, in the past, characteristic of victims of acute discrimination.

Well, was there any objective basis for their feelings of rejection by society, and particularly by their peers? We next studied high school seniors to see whether being obese or of normal weight affected their chances of acceptance into college. We selected a group of obese and non-obese boys and girls matched for IQ, achievement scores, teacher recommendations, etc., so that the only important difference was indeed in their weight.

What we found was quite clear. In colleges where acceptance was conditional on a personal interview, the obese girls had only one-third as good a chance of being accepted as their normal-weight classmates; the obese boys had half as good a chance. On the other hand, at colleges that admitted students on their marks and recommendations alone and did not use interviews there was no significant difference in acceptance rates between the obese and on-obese youngsters.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

It appeared that at the interview the obese were penalized, usually in terms like, "Martha is a very nice girl, quite gifted in mathematics and music. But somehow, I don't think she'd fit terribly well here. I am sure she'd be happier in a different kind of college."

So discrimination against the obesé is a fact. I am sure that it is not, in most cases, intentional. Yet it is not, for that reason, any less unfair or destructive.

(For readers who struggle to control their weight, Dr. Mayer has written 10 Sure Ways to Keep Off Pounds. For this guide, send 50c and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope with the words Weight Control inside the flap to the Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas Street, Victoria.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

When play had ended in today's deal, South had incurred a one-trick set. An analysis of his play revealed that he could have fulfilled his contract. Further analysis revealed that, as declarer played the hand, one of the defenders could have defeated the contract. Still further analysis revealed that the contract was always makable. Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♥	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

When the deal was played, East put up the spade queen on the opening lead, and it won the trick. The nine of spades was returned, South following suit with the seven-spot. West overtook the nine with the ten, and played back the spade king, driving out South's ace.

Since West was obviously long in spades, South decided that East had the greater length in diamonds. So South next cashed the ace and king of diamonds, after which he led a third diamond, hoping that East would capture the trick. As is apparent, West won the third diamond lead. He then cashed two more spade tricks, and South was down one.

Admittedly, East, rather than West, figured to have three diamonds. But, without relinquishing that possibility, South could have given himself an extra chance to bring home the diamond suit.

After winning the third spade lead, and cashing the diamond ace at trick four, South should have entered dummy via the club king to lead a second diamond. East, perforce, would play the queen — and declarer would allow the queen to win. South's contract would now be there for the taking.

When South led the diamond ace at trick four, East could have defeated the contract by tossing away the queen. It would now have become impossible to prevent West from winning a trick with his jack of diamonds, and cashing two more spade tricks.

After winning the third spade lead, South should have entered dummy via the club king, and led a diamond. If east played the queen, South would allow the queen to win. If, instead, East followed with a low diamond, South would win with his ace. He would then re-enter dummy via the heart king, and lead a second diamond. East would now be forced to play the queen — which would be permitted to win the trick. Thus West would be prevented from obtaining the lead to cash his established spades.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Thurs., April 10

By SYDNEY OMARR

Thought-provoking quote of going to be alone, I would rather be by-myself." — note from a Gemini: "If I'm Marilyn Monroe.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stress inventiveness, independence. Highlight new starts, contacts. Have confidence in your own abilities. Don't count too heavily on others. Your own inclinations, desires and hunches should be given top priority.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get chance to be more selective. You can also listen more to your heart. Accent is on willingness to pay a price. You will be able to afford it. You could get to have your cake and eat it, too. Aquarian is likely to be in picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may have more fun than anticipated. Rotund individual, fond of talking big, provides the laughter. Sagittarius figures prominently. Remember recent resolutions, expecially those concerning food and drink.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Career, hard facts and the facing of reality — these are accented. Aquarius, Leo and Taurus persons could figure in important ways. What appeared a solid base could be in process of being dismantled. Know it and don't get caught in naive posture.

LEO. (July 23-Aug. 22): Change, travel, variety are featured. Your questions will be answered. Gemini, Virgo persons pop up and demand your attention. Accent is on love, romance, creativity and your ability to bridge any generation gap.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Money, taxes, insurance policies and investments dominate. You learn about costs. You deal with security and family matters. Taurus, Libra persons are in picture. One close to you reveals surprise — of pleasant variety.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take your time. Play waiting game. Refuse to be rushed into judgment. You are not being presented with factual information. Haze surrounds picture. Know it and keep guard in protective position. Pisces individual may have some answers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Undercover procedures are featured. Be discreet. Study Libra message. Play cards close to chest. Employment picture is brighter. You're going to receive praise from one who had appeared indifferent.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Now you can reach more people, get credit for efforts and rid yourself of losing proposition. One behind the scenes could be tossing brickbats. Most important is that your love, affection is reciprocated. Who could ask for much more?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stick to familiar ground. Overcome temptation to skip essentials. Leo, Aquarius persons are in picture. Home, property and intrinsic values are features. You will have chance to review appraisal. You'll have privilege of leaving final imprint.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Relative who is argumentative is willing to be convinced. Know it and apply gentle pressure. Trust hunch. Idea can be transformed into viable concept. What seems a setback will boomerang in your favor.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid extravagance. Seek simplicity. Means don't take more steps than necessary. Those seeking grills are willing to spend — your money. Draw in reins. There is no need for you to be a fool — for any person.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are dynamic, independent, selfish, sexy and creative. August will be your most significant month of 1975. During the year, you gain more recognition. You end a relationship which has been destructive. Leo, Aquarius persons play key roles in your life. You are an unusual person, not everyone's cup of tea. Be yourself, despite those who urge you to "soften" your approach. Being you is inimitable.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. Hunter

The children all stood, chanting "Happy Birthday," when Martha came into the room.

"Thank you all so much," she said, smiling with very real pleasure. "And now at last I'll let you into the secret just two less than twice what of your old teacher's age. It's you get if you subfract the square of the second digit from the square of the first."

Your figure it out!

Blenders Have Their Limitations

OTTAWA (CP) — Although manufacturers would like you to think that blenders can replace wire whisks, cheese graters, coffee grinders, hand-held egg-beaters, electric hand-mixers and food-choppers in one fell swoop, "their blandishments must be taken with a grain of salt," says the Consumers' Association of Canada.

"Blenders basically perform four tasks — grinding, chopping, blending and liquefying ingredients," the association says in a news release.

"They are excellent at blending sauces and medium-consistency batters, making apple-sauce, mixing salad dressings, soups and beverages.

"However, they will not whip egg whites, chop ice evenly for drinks, grate cheese finely, handle heavy, thick batters, knead dough or mash potatoes."

If you're considering the addition of a blender to your kitchen appliances, remember that the array of speed settings on many models does not necessarily translate into better performance.

The CAC says your selection should have the following features:

— Pouring spout covered by a lid.

— Removable blades with curved arms extending both upward and downward.

A glass container is more durable than plastic, will last longer and does not retain odors. However, it is more expensive and heavier. Other desirable features are a narrow pouring spout and ridges on the inside to deflect the ingredients being blended back into the path of the blades.

The CAC says three or four speeds are sufficient. A separate "easily noticed" off button is handy for emergencies.

After all that, the blender should be measured to make sure it fits under your kitchen cupboards.

Still High on 'Living Foods'

By VIVIAN BROWN
Associated Press

For more than a half-century in North America, nutritionist Gayelord Hauser has been touting "living foods" as the key to looking younger and living longer, and expounding the nutritional value of yogurt, yeast, wheat germ and molasses, which he calls the "super four." He appears periodically on the lecture circuit as an example that the health principles he advocates do work, at least for him.

At 80 he appears youthful and vigorous. Slim and suntanned, he looked far younger as he sat recently in a New York hotel waiting for his long-time friend, Greta Garbo, with whom he would take a walk. It makes him "a bit nervous," he said, "to see 60-year-old people on the street tottering as they walk."

"Men and women become incompatible when their nerves and brains are undernourished. If each would have a glass of fresh orange juice in the morning before speaking to each other, they would raise their blood sugar quickly and be less irritable."

When he brought his four super foods "to the attention of North Americans" wheat germ and brewer's yeast were being discarded by beer and flour people, he maintains.

"In St. Louis they were throwing away mountains of the yeast, the fermentation after the beer is made. In Minneapolis they were feeding the wheat germ to the pigs." He suggested the molasses because people were drinking a lot of milk, which lacks iron. Yogurt appealed to him as "an easily assimilated protein."

Hauser had detractors in the early days — in 1922 he had an office in Chicago where he taught nutrition and in the 1930s he was teaching movie stars how to eat — but criticism ebbed as scientists began seconding nutritional ideas. Two years ago he says The Times of London chose him as one of "The Thousand Makers of the 20th Century" along with Schweitzer, Salk and others.

He lives in Beverly Hills in winter, but had just come from Palm Beach where he had autographed a revised and updated edition of his book, Treasury of Secrets.

He doesn't take credit for all the things he recommends. He has listened, learned, experimented and updated his ideas. He now suggests skimmed milk instead of evaporated in making yogurt because "people are more figure-conscious." A batch made at home should always be tested on the palm of the hand as Russian and Bulgarian women do. "If the yougrt is too hot it will kill off the important Lacto bacillus bulgaricus," he explained.

In recent years he has added lecithin as the fifth wonder food. Considered by some nutritionists to be an emulsifier of fat, lecithin is used by Hauser with brewer's yeast in a drink that makes the yeast more palatable. The formula was put together by an ill chemist "to save his heart and clogged veins." It did, Hauser claims.

Although the chemist used it on his cereal, dry, Hauser prefers it as a drink. The one he concocted "would revive the dead," he says laughing.

He combines one cup of fruit juice — orange, grapefruit, pineapple — with one tablespoon each of the yeast, wheat germ, lecithin and bone meal and a couple of tablespoons of yogurt or kefir, a tart bacillus.

People should grow their own foods if possible, even rose hips, which is high in vitamin C, he maintains.

He stresses that proteins are the most important element in the diet, reminding his followers that nutritionists agree that every person should have at least one gram of first-class protein — eggs, cheese, milk, yogurt, meat, fish, soybeans, nuts or fresh wheat germ — each day for every 2.2 pounds of body weight real, not overweight. A 120-pound woman needs about 55 grams a day, a 150-pound man about 68. Twenty-eight grams are about one ounce.

Hardly Honeymoon —More Like Re-run

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, very much against the wishes of her mother and me, moved out of our home to live with a boy she'd been going with for about a year.

After living together for two years, which they did openly, they decided to get married. Now this daughter wants me to foot the bill for a big church wedding in June. She wants a long white gown, veil, bridesmaids, flowers and a catered dinner and reception for 300, complete with orchestra.

Not only that, but she told her grandparents that in case they wanted any ideas on what to give her for a wedding present, a Hawaiian honeymoon would really be great.

My question: Do you think the kind of wedding our daughter wants is in order under the circumstances? And what are your thoughts on a Hawaiian honeymoon? — Father of the Bride.

DEAR FATHER: After a couple has been living together openly for two years, a wedding such as your daughter is planning is, I think, in poor taste. Also, a Hawaiian vacation would be lovely, but it could hardly be called a "honeymoon." It would be more like a summer re-run.

DEAR ABBY: Our widowed mother, age 52, informed her children, much to our surprise, that she had been dating a man for the last three weeks.

The following week, she called and said she wanted us kids to meet this man because she was thinking about marrying him.

Well, we met him, and he seemed very polite and friendly. He told mother that he was an undercover FBI agent. My brother was very skeptical, so he asked his wife's cousin, who is on the police force, to run a check on this man. The report came back that this man was not connected with any law enforcement agency.

My brother and I got together and decided that we should tell our mother what we found out, but before we had a chance to tell her, she ups and marries this character.

Our question: Should we tell mom? Or is it none of our business now that she's married to him? — Loused Up!

DEAR LOUSED: You're right. It's none of your business. She may be very happy with this man. If she isn't, and asks you for help, then you can become involved. But for now, the word from here is — cool it.

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a non-Jewish person who all of a sudden starts wearing a Star of David? She went to Catholic schools all her life and couldn't possibly believe in the Jewish faith. — Just Asking.

DEAR JUST: I would assume that she believes in someone who believes in the Jewish faith, and she doesn't care who knows it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO VIRGO: When a man tells the woman who has been dating him exclusively for two years that he thinks they should both start dating others, it's the beginning of the end. Say farewell to your Pisces. There are other fish in the sea.

1.8M Canadians Receiving Old Age Pension

OTTAWA (CP) — There were 1,892,454 recipients of the old-age security pension in December, 1974, and nearly two-thirds of them received a guaranteed income supplement, welfare department statistics tabled in the Commons show.

Average guaranteed income supplements paid in December, 1974, were $86.48. The basic old age pension was $117.02 then but has since increased to $123.42 due to increases in the cost of living.

There were 14,972 old-age pensioners living outside the country in December, the figures show.

The information was released in response to a written question from Stanley Knowles (NDP — Winnipeg North Centre).

QUICK CHICKEN FOR 8 USING LEFTOVERS

By MARY MOORE

Probably many of you find yourself in my situation. I often buy a boiling fowl, use what I want for a current meal and find I have chicken meat and broth left over.

If you do not have leftover chicken and broth the recipe I am about to give is so worthwhile for eight people I advise buying and boiling a chicken to make it.

QUICK AND EASY CHICKEN

½ c. butter or margarine
½ c. flour
1 tsp. salt
1 c. half and half cream
¾ c. milk
2 c. chicken broth
2½ to 3 c. cut-up cooked chicken
1 tbsp. chicken bouillon cordial (OR 2 chicken bouillon cubes)
½ green pepper chopped
1 c. whole green seedless grapes
¼ lb. sliced mushrooms
2 or 3 tbsp. chopped pimiento

Heat to blend butter, flour and salt. Stir in cream, milk and broth until thick. Stir in chicken cordial or cubes. Add coarsely cut-up chicken, green pepper, grapes, mushrooms and pimento and heat stirring until just boiling or for safety's sake heat through over boiling water in double boiler.

Now this may be served in many way: on toast points, in patty shells, over rice or noodles.

Write to Mary Moore, 32 Churchill Ave., Hamilton, Ont., enclosing stamped self-addressed envelope and 10 cents for each specified recipe.

B.C. Tel Cuts Student Jobs

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Tel has reneged on a commitment to hire about 400 students for summer work, Frank Tucker, vice-president in charge of personnel and industrial relations, said Monday.

He blamed the move on the "general economic picture" and said the company has already notified the union it will probally be laying off some of its regular full-time staff.

The students had been notified three weeks ago that their applications had been accpeted. However, in letters received Monday, they were told there will be no jobs for them and to seek employment elsewhere.

"The really upsetting thing is that they could see this coming and didn't let us know earlier," said one student who has worked for B.C. Tel four previous summers.

The company announced last Thursday it would be laying off some staff because of spiralling inflation costs.

Date of the layoffs and the number and categories of workers to be affected had not been decided but seniority would be the major criterion in retaining employees.

"We are trying to minimize the effects of cost increases so they do not all have to be passed on to the customer," said J. A. MacInnes, vice-president for public affairs.

A 4.6-per-cent rate increase went into effect in February and the company applied in March for a further 20-er-cent increase.

BRIDLE BITS

By PHIL MERRICK

Notes from the Oldtimer. "Travel by horse-back can be very pleasant, especially when all dismounts are voluntary ones. Even involuntary dismounts are not all that bad. It's just that sudden stop when one meets the ground that hurts.

"People have different ideas about the kind of horse they want to ride. Some want to ride a stallion. To me that's like walking around with a bomb in your pocket. The explosion can come anytime.

"There's some riders who prefer to ride mares. Most menfolk have all the trouble they can handle with female humans. Why they want to start all over again with a female horse beats me.

"To me a gelding is the best choice. They get more brains when they lose their manhood. With nothing to bother them they're always reliable and willing to work."

A horse is not mature until it is seven years old. If you want the best years of a horse's life, buy one between seven and eight years old. It'll be useful until well into it's twenties.

A great deal of pleasure can be had in showing a horse at halter. Not everyone interested in horses is proficient enough to ride or even drive a horse in the show ring.

There is considerable challenge in purchasing a young animal, training it to walk, trot and stand properly for its handler in the show ring. The judge selects the entry that fits his idea of perfection, in a halter class, for the first ribbon. Although sometimes the ribbon is given to an animal that does not stand too well for inspection, a well-schooled animal at halter has every chance of being considered.

A foal from ribbon-winning parents, preferably pure-bred, should be selected if it is not possible to raise one's own. Straight limbs, quality and the obvious breed characteristics and a good way of moving are basic requirements. A late foal will always be smaller and at a disadvantage until its a three-year old.

If the prospective handler has not had any experience a little help may be needed. Observation at the shows will provide a background and care should be taken to notice the manner in which the well-known horsemen and women handle their animals. Preparation for the animals' condition and schooling should start months ahead of the show season.

Horses that do well in halter classes bring high prices. It is very rewarding to look back two or three years and remember the foal that you selected and developed into a halter champion.

Condition your horse gradually for the long rides you'll take as the weather improves. Half-hour walks under saddle each evening for a week, increased to an hour with trotting for short distances for another week then add short easy gallops for a week and your mount will carry you for two and three hour rides without becoming distressed.

No foot, no horse is just as true as it is ancient. Have your farrier attend your horse's hoof needs. If your farrier agrees, you could save money by leaving shoes off the hind feet.

Too much green grass for a horse on dry feed will probably cause problems. Introduce green pasture to your horse's diet gradually. This is most important for fat horses which may founder from too much sudden work or green food. Be sure a hot horse just back from a ride only gets a few swallows of water during the first 20 minutes after its return from a ride.

First Shots Fired in Battle for Saigon

Times News Services

SAIGON — Two North Vietnamese divisions probed the outer defences of Saigon today and partially occupied two provincial capitals and two district towns in what military sources called the beginning of the battle for Saigon.

The heaviest fighting was reported at the town of Xuan Loc, 38 miles almost due east of the capital, but there also was a Communist commando attack at Tan An provincial capital, 25 miles south of Saigon, where the Communists cut key highway 4 into the Mekong Delta for eight hours.

The thrusts into the provincial capitals marked the first major fighting in provinces around Saigon since the latest Communist push began March 10 and quickly overran two-thirds of South Vietnam.

Communist gunners early today shelled Bien Hoa air base, 15 miles north of Saigon and military headquarters for the defence of the province around Saigon. Spokesmen said the 26 shells killed two soldiers and wounded 15 persons.

Brig. Gen. Nguyen Van Hieu, deputy commander of military region III which includes Saigon, was found shot to death in his headquarters at Bien Hoa Tuesday. There were conflicting reports over whether his death was an accident or whether he had committed suicide in despondency over military reverses.

Saigon was calm, with most residents unaware of the direct military threat against the most lightly defended approaches to the capital.

Communist diplomats have predicted an all-out attack on Saigon in the near future unless President Nguyen Van Thieu is replaced by a chief of state willing to negotiate with the Viet Cong.

Opposition politicians condemned the bombing of the palace by a renegade fighter pilot, but called on Thieu to resign.

Military sources said the pilot apparently flew into Communist-controlled territory after the attack and defected to the Viet Cong.

Reports from Da Nang carried by the official newspaper of the North Vietnamese Army have said refugees from the old Vietnamese capital city of Hue who crowded into Da Nang immediately before its capture were being sent home as rapidly as possible.

It said that about 20,000 South Vietnamese troops in Da Nang sought out Viet Cong forces during the fall of the city and voluntarily surrendered their weapons.

In Washington, President Ford neared a decision on whether to try to salvage the rapidly deteriorating situation in South Vietnam by seeking more aid from Congress.

Ford summoned his top diplomatic and military advisers to a national security council meeting to consider the options. Privately, his aides doubted South Vietnam could remain in the non-communist camp for long.

Gen. Frederick C. Weyand, the army chief of staff, told Congress that South Vietnam would not survive without major additional military aid.

"Weyand told us that if we help them there is a chance," reported Rep. F. Edward Hebert (Dem—La.). "He couldn't guarantee anything, except that there would be a chance. If we don't help them, they are gone. It's as simple as that."

In Ottawa, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen says the current military offensive by North Vietnam does not represent a "similar parallel" with U.S. bombing of Hanoi.

In explaining to the Commons why the Canadian government has not lodged an official protest with Hanoi — a Commons resolution denounced American bombing in January, 1973 — the minister said the "worthwhileness" of such a move must be considered.

And, replying to questions from Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North), he said the welfare of Canadians now in territories controlled by the Communists "would not be helped by inflammatory language."

Cambodia Standoff

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Government military positions on two sides of the Phnom Penh defence perimeter have deteriorated further, military sources reported today.

Field reports said there were several rebel penetrations of defence lines northwest of the airport during the night.

Despite the rebel gain of several hundred yards in the inch-by-inch fighting. Military sources say the insurgents themselves are worn down by three months of fighting and unable to mass enough troops to exploit their advantage.

In political developments, Prime Mnister Long Boret met again with senior government officials following his return Tuesday from a week-long absence in Indonesia and Thailand but the government denied Bangkok reports that Long Boret had met with Khmer Rouge delegates there.

Long Boret did discuss the possibility of trying to open talks with the insurgents in his meetings with Thai and Indonesian leaders, government sources said, but not with the insurgents.

Tight Controls On TV Urged

By MICHAEL LAVOIE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC) must exert tight controls on the growing cable television industry if domestic broadcasting is to be protected from further competition by U.S. border television stations, the Canadian Association of Broadcasters said Tuesday.

The association, representing 370 private television and radio stations, told a CRTC hearing on proposed new cable regulations that cable operators are fragmenting television audiences and threatening the domestic broadcasting industry.

Association official Murray Chercover, president of CTV Television Network Ltd., said U.S. television signals imported by cable operators are undermining the operations of many domestic broadcasters.

The association urged full support of new CRTC cable regulations after the Canadian Cable Television Association appealed for lenience in applying controls.

The CRTC is scheduled to hear 15 submissions and consider briefs from another 26 groups on proposed regulations which would confirm general cable licencing policies now in effect.

The regulations would require the country's 400 cable systems to follow a list of channel allocation priorities. They would carry CBC outlets first and use U.S. border station signals only after all domestic priorities are met.

The regulations also would require cable systems to originate their own programming on community channels and bar them from carrying advertising or sponsored programs on community channels from substituting or changing signals without CRTC approval.

The cable association argued Tuesday for exemptions from the community channel requirement for companies with 2,000 subscribers or less, the limited right to carry advertising and greater freedom to respond to viewer preference by picking up U.S. border station signals.

CRTC chairman Pierre Juneau rebuked cable association president Robert C. Short for making what he said were unfounded criticisms of CRTC policy.

Mr. Juneau said the commission winced at accusations that cable operators are regulated excessively in order to protect broadcasters.

The broadcasters said the presence of U.S. signals on cable systems thwarts the Broadcasting Act's objective of using public airwaves to encourage stronger national identity and unity.

Mr. Chercover and association chairman Philippe de Gaspe Beaubien of Telemedia Communications, Montreal, said regulations should require that cable signals from domestic broadcasts be technically as good as signals from outside stations.

The hearing continues today.

Camosun Classes Resume

All Camosun College community education classes that were halted by the strike of Greater Victoria school custodians in late February will resume Monday in the schools.

Classes that have been running in alternative meeting places will continue in those places for the rest of the session.

The school board cancelled all after-school use of the buildings when custodians struck Feb. 24.

The custodians and maintenance workers returned to work on Monday.

Moslems Shelled

MANILA (AP)—The navy shelled a coastal Moslem village in the southern Philippines a week ago, killing 15 civilians, including six children, and wounding 15 others, civilian government sources said Tuesday.

SOYUZ CRASH RAISES DOUBT

WASHINGTON (UP) — The abortive landing of Soyuz 18 in Siberia on Sunday has raised some serious doubts that the Soviet Union is ready to conduct its part of the joint Apollo-Soyuz mission this summer.

The Soviets had not told their counterparts in the United States about what went wrong when Soyuz 18 veered off course, but apparently the spacecraft and its upper stage rocket began to pitch south from its normal course when a ground command ordered the engine to shut down.

This took place less than five minutes after the launching when Soyuz 18 was 100 miles high and moving at a speed of about 10,000 miles an hour — not enough to reach orbit. The shutdown of the engine slowed the spacecraft down and forced cosmonauts Vasily Lazarev and Oleg Makarov to land 1,000 miles downrange from the spaceport of Tyuratam and less than 170 miles from the Chinese border.

Had the upper stage engine of Soyuz kept firing for another 20 seconds, the cosmonauts would have been forced to land somewhere inside China, either in Sinkiang Province or in Mongolia.

"This is the first time a manned mission has ever been aborted before reaching orbit," a senior American space official said Monday. "Had this flight been ours, there would be some serious questions that have to answered before anybody commits to a July 15 launch date."

July 15 is the date set for cosmonauts Aledsei Leonov and Vasily Kubasov to go into orbit in a Soyuz spacecraft and await the arrival two days later of astronauts Thomas Stafford, Donald K. (Deke) Slayteon and Vance Brand in an Apollo spaceship. The two spacecrafts are to dock in orbit and stay docked for two full days in the first international manned space mission.

Nobody said the failure of Soyuz 18 meant that Apollo-Soyuz would have to be postponed, but at least four American space sources questioned whether the failure might recur when the Soviets fly their leg of Apollo-Soyuz in July.

"There might be a very simple reason for the failure, one that does not need major changes to correct," one source said. "On the other hand, it could be a major systems failure and if it is I don't see how we could avoid a postponement of the July 15 mission date."

Senator William Proxmire (Dem.-Wisc.) asked Monday that the Central Intelligence Agency CIA determine whether Soviet Union manned space equipment is safe enough to avoid any tragedy during the July joint U.S.-Soviet space docking project.

Proxmire, chairman of a Senate appropriations subcommittee on space, said the Soviet Union's aborted Soyuz spacecraft mission last Saturday "reinforces my deep concern that the upcoming joint Apollo-Soyuz experiment may be dangerous to American astronauts."

He requested that the CIA study the safety of Soviet space technology and report to his subcommittee next month.

At the very least, American sources said, the Soviets probably will feel compelled to fly an unmanned Soyuz into orbit between now and the July 15 launching date. Sources said they would do this to assure themselves as well as the United States that the cause of the Soyuz 18 failure had been identified and corrected.

Whatever went wrong with the flight of Soyuz 18, it happened just after the upper stage engine began to fire to lift the seven-ton Soyuz to a speed fast enough (17,500 miles an hour) to carry it away from earth.

The Soviet news agency Tass said simply that the "carrier rocket's movement deviated from the pre-set values and an automatic device produced the command to discontinue the flight."

This sounded to American space observers as if the rocket and spacecraft suddenly began to turn south, taking the spacecraft off its course and toward China instead of in a northeasterly direction across Siberia. At that, the engine was ordered shut down, the spacecraft was separated from the booster rocket and flown back to Earth.

The spacecraft parachuted down to earth in Siberia, just southwest of Gorno-Altarsk in the Altai Mountains and no more than 50 miles from a 15,000-foot peak. It landed an hour before sunset in Siberia and almost surely in snow drifts, where the cosmonauts probably spent the night.

Ferry Data Held Back

Resources Minister Bob Williams said Tuesday he will not table the basic information and economic data which the government used to purchase the Princess Marguerite.

Liberal Garde Gardom (Vancouver-Point Grey) asked the minister to table the information used by the government in its purchase of the ferry and 8.7 acres of Canadian Pacific property in the Inner Harbor for $2.45 million.

Williams replied simply, "no."

The minister answered a series of questions about the sale during an unusually dull question period in the legislature when party leaders were away in Ottawa for the federal-provincial energy conference.

He said documents to finalize the sale have not been received yet and arrangements for ferry docking in Seattle are still not completed.

Saanich MLA Hugh Curtis asked if the minister intended to ensure complete co-operation and consultation with Victoria city council on long range development of the government's Inner Harbor land holdings.

The government has already been in consultation with the city through deputy lands minister Norm Pearson, said Williams.

32 WIN DUKE'S AWARDS

Dule of Edinburgh Awards will be presented to 32 Dean Heights junior high school students Monday morning by Education Minister Eileen Dailly.

Award winners must show persistent effort and growth in the areas of volunteer community service, hobbies, adventure and design for living or physical fitness.

Students work their way from the bronze award through the silver to the gold one, a process that usually takes three years.

Community projects tackled included working at Project Recycle, earning St. John Ambulance First Aid certificates, and helping older people in their gardens.

Adventure projects were hikes, including bike trips of several days on the Gulf Islands for the silver and gold level students.

Hobbies included scuba diving, leatherwork and card games, and design for living and physical fitness included homemaking and physical skills.

Fewer Jobs For UVic Students

University of Victoria students are flooding the campus Manpower office looking for summer jobs which aren't as easy to get this year, office manager Frank Schroeder said today.

"They'll have to work harder ae getting a job," said Schroeder.

One reason, he said, is that neither federal nor provincial government budgets for student employment increased much this year although salaries increased considerably.

That means more money but for fewer people, he said.

The campus office has averaged 175-200 visits from job-seeking students per day over the past few weeks.

Canada Manpower officials in Vancouver have said they expect fewer students to be placed this summer than last, about 20,000 compared to 25,000 in 1974.

Major Rape Law Changes?

OTTAWA (CP) — Major changes in Criminal Code laws against rape and other sexual offences are expected to be urged this week by the federal advisory council on the status of women.

The proposals, under discussion at a three-day council meeting that opened Monday, will probably go well beyond amendments already planned by the justice department.

The department is working on changes, part of an omnibus bill covering about a dozen sections of the code, to protect rape victims from embarrassment and harassment in the courts.

—Stop defence lawyers, except in rare cases, from questioning a woman's moral integrity, personal habits or private life.

—Exclude the public from all or part of the preliminary inquiry and trial of rape cases.

—Encourage rape trials outside a victim's hometown in cases where she is well known in the community.

A justice department official said Monday the bill is expected to be introduced in the Commons "within weeks."

A working page prepared by council staff workers for discussion at the meeting agrees with some of the justice department proposals but opposes those restricting access by the news media and public.

Similar working documents have been prepared on female appointments to federal boards, commissions and Crown corporations; family planning and birth control; women in banking, matrimonial property and one-parent families.

All will be aired by council members, attending the meeting from across the country, and distilled into a list of recommendations for government action.

The working document on rape says victims are too often subjected to gruelling questioning on prior sexual conduct.

All such questions by defence lawyers should be submitted to the trial judge in advance to determine relevance, it recommends.

It also calls for abolition of the mandatory caution to the jury on the need for evidence to corroborate a victim's story.

"The general rule that evidence of a single competent witness is sufficient in law to support a verdict should be applicable in sexual crimes."

Another major proposal urges the government to rewrite sexual assault laws into four general categories of seriousness depending on degree: Whether a weapon was used, whether the victim is injured, whether sexual penetration occurs, or whether it stops at sexual contact.

The paper also urges abolition of all Criminal Code references to a victim being "of previously chaste character."

"If a sexual offence is to be considered a crime, then it is such, whatever the prior sexual character of the victim.

"Making it a crime dependent on prior chasteness brings a moral judgment to the law which is no longer justifiable."

The paper says laws protecting young women should be extended to young men but it urges re-examination of age restrictions in some offences.

"It may no longer be necessary to provide for the protection of a person 16 years or older from seduction."

The Criminal Code carries a penalty of up to two years in jail for anyone seducing a girl "of previously chaste character" if she is between 16 and 18.

"Indeed," the paper adds, "the question of protection of 14-to-16-year-olds may be questioned."

Intercourse with females under 16 is classified by the code as statutory rape. It carries a penalty of up to five years if the girl is between 14 and 16, and up to life imprisonment if the victim is younger.

The paper calls for outright abolition of some offences still on the statute books, including the restriction against sexual intercourse between an employer and an employee 21, or the seducing of female passengers by crew members on a ship.

Little opposition is expected to most proposals contained in the working papers.

The council was set up in May, 1973, to advise the government and public on matters affecting the status of women. It is chaired by Dr. Katie Cooke.

New 3-Year University Financing System Proposed

An overhaul of the financing proceedure for the province's three universities has been recommended in the first report of the Universities Council of B.C. tabled in the legislature Tuesday.

Established last year as a clearing house between the provincial government and the universities, the council recommends that the annual budgeting system be scrapped in favor of a three-year-system.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly said she will schedule discussions with the council on the suggestion.

The new technique, according to the council chaired by UBC professor Bill Armstrong, would allow the universities to plan programs on a three-year basis, instead of the present year-to-year basis. It wold provide for a firm commitment within the first year projected, and for more open and somewhat less firm commitment in subsequent budget years.

The provincial government would be given all the information required to budget for the universities, on a continual rather than annual basis.

In conjunction with the proposed new system, capital grant payments would be made on a quarterly pay-out basis.

"The universities will require some assurance that projects begun in the first year, once approved, will continue to receive the necessary funding until completion."

Capital expenditure would be determined by analysing each new project from planning through design, tendering and construction and purchase of furnishings and occupation.

Capital project construction cost increases are affected by delays, according to the council. the use of this payment system would guarantee that public funds were available when actually required.

The council also recommended an operating grant of $155.6 million for the three universities in the current fiscal year — an increase of $36.5 million over last year.

An additional $15 million would be set aside for distribution on a continuous payment basis.

Universities asked for funds totalling $161.6 million and the government, as stated in estimates for the current fiscal year, agreed to a $150.2 million operating grant with a $12 million capital grant.

The council report noted that the escalation of costs to the university system must be taken into consideration, but maintained that escalation should be brought under control.

"The council expects to carry out a series of studies arising from the need for full understanding of the problems and opportunities facing the universities in B.C. which will provide a basis for better analysis and control of these costs.

Breakdown of the suggested $36 million increase in the operating grant, suggested on the assumption that there be no over-all increase in student fees, included:

$21.6 million for salaries and benefit increases; $3.3 million to cover inflation in area of supplies and services; $3.9 million for the recently launched innovative programs; $6 million to cover increased costs due to enrolment increases and $1.5 million for planned new programs.

Last year's grant from the provincial government was $110 million with an $11 million capital grant payment.

Shrubs Are Growing—Prune Away

Increasing length and strength of daylight is bringing along growth of established shrubs, causing gardeners to grasp secateurs firmly at the ready whenever they venture into the still sometimes chilly garden. What can be pruned?

The bare fact that shrubs which flower from June onwards may receive pruning is hardly enough information for most secateur handlers. Of little help would be a list of all shrubs capable of growing in this area and known to have been available here for the past 40 to 50 years, for too many gardeners do not keep the names of their plants nor do they pass on the names they have to a new owner of the garden they planted. So a few examples must be given.

Buddleia davidii (variabilis) and all its lovely named varieties in deep purple, lilac, white and deep rose, will flower more abundantly in late summer if cut back hard now. The new long canes which begin to grow immediately will then bear the scented cones of bloom at eye level or a little above.

What we do is to look for signs of new leaf growth low on the old branches regardless of what is up above. Make a cut about half an inch above new growth. Dead wood must be removed wherever you find it.

If the weather is still mainly dry, water these shrubs if your soil is sandy or otherwise well drained.

Don't prune the other two species of buddleia at this time. The golden B. globosa and the graceful lilac B. alternifolia are both pruned after flowering, the first in early May, the second in mid June.

The hardy Fuchsia magellanica in the variety riccartonii, grows madly all summer to bloom for weeks on end from late August if the old branches are now all cut down to about a foot or so above soil level.

Not much growth may be visible, though in warmer gardens new shoots may be seen at the base. With a mulch of fresh compost applied in early May, this fuchsia will send up five foot branches in a season. It is a delightfully easy little shrub for partially shaded small areas where a dark green background shows off the jewel-like flowers. Good by salt water too.

Nearly every genus of our more common garden shrubs contains some species which bloom in spring and early summer, and other species blooming later in the year. Each species and its varieties must be treated accordingly.

Evergreen Ceanothus dentatus is one of the loveliest of the May flowering shrubs with its small shining leaves and masses of tightly packed rich blue flowers. A real sun lover this, to do well on a wood post supporting the patio screen where winter protection from northeast winds is provided by other shrubs or by the house. Little pruning is needed, only a shortening of side growths after flowering as a control of size.

To be pruned now however are the late blooming ceanothuses of which Gloire de Versailles (blue), Marie Simon (pink) and Henri Defosse (navy blue) are varieties. All previous growth is cut back hard now to just above visible new tiny indications of growth. Blooms will be more freely produced and will be larger if this is done each spring.

Knowing your plants by genus, species and variety will ensure that you give them the care needed for producing the beauty of which they are capable.

QUALITY, PRIVACY, ECONOMY, APPEAL

If these criteria are important to you then you better view this lovely home before it sells — and it's going to sell quickly. 2 bedrooms on the main and one nicely finished in the full high basement. Large living room with lots of windows and a nicely located fireplace. When I say windows, you should see the dining room and kitchen. You'll be hard pressed to find brighter friendlier rooms. This should appeal to the economy minded — storm windows all around. Saving more than pennies in these days of high oil prices. The basement area is high, dry and bright — a delightful area for canning or a work shop. Exceptionally large backyard providing room for a vegetable garden or just lots of open space. Nestled in a quiet little street only one block long it's hard to find a more secluded spot. It was built in 1967, looks like it was built today, and it's bound to sell tomorrow.

RE-SALE
Phase 1
Regretfully, my client must relinquish his beautiful home in this, the finest of Victoria's condominium apartments. A large 2 bedroom suite with 2 full bathrooms, one en-suite. Top quality carpeting, subdued vinyl wall-coverings, and expensive overdrapes that blend with most furnishings provide the perfect setting that is so necessary.
The suite is furnished with a full complement of major appliances, including in-suite laundry facilities. Adjacent to the kitchen is very large storage room just perfect for a freezer, chest. Additional storage space is provided in the covered carport area.
A very attractive floor plan of 1,400 sq. ft. and definitely different from all others you may have seen. Included also are the Castle, the enclosed swimming pool and saunas, and the extensive gardens. To see this exceptional suite dial

Streamline Set For Recreation

The Capital Regional Board is expected to approve later today a works committee recommendation which would consolidate and streamline recreation administration in electoral areas.

Among changes:

—consolidation of five commissions which now administer the Juan de Fuca swimming pool, ice arena, senior citizens building, the curling complex under construction and 88-acre Juan de Fuca Park.

—recreation planning regulations to permit one or more, or parts of one or more electoral areas to join if they want to jointly operate programs such as soccer, baseball or football leagues or programs for parks, including programs for adults.

—park regulations changes which would allow electoral areas to acquire and maintain community or provincial class C parks if they wanted in the name of the regional board.

Dennis Young, executive director of the regional board, described some of the proposed changes as "just an avenue for local municipalities to work in a regional framework" if they want to.

The regional board was also scheduled to hear a status report from engineering director Bill Gerry on the planned outfall at Clover Point, where raw sewage is now dumped near the tideline.

Progress on the project has been delayed by a dispute between municipalities on cost sharing.

The Regional Hospital Board, also scheduled to meet later today, was expected to give routine approval to a bylaw enacting its previously approved budget for the year.

CONCERT CANCELLED

Due to a prior out-of-town commitment with Victoria Symphony, concertmaster Harry Cawood's recital with Edward Norman at St. John's Anglican Church, scheduled for tonight at 8, has been cancelled.

Dockyard Talks Sought

Dockyard workers in Esquimalt have asked for a conciliation board to help settle their dispute with the Treasury Board in Ottawa.

The almost 900 ship repair workers in Esquimalt, members of the Dockyard Trades and Labor Council, bargain jointly with dockyard workers in Esquimalt.

A spokesman for the Public Service Staff Relations Board which must appoint the conciliation board, said the parties have still not agreed on a chairman for the board.

The Esquimalt contract expires March 23.

The trades and labor council covers members of 12 unions employed at dockyard.

The union negotiators bargain for wages, holidays hours of work and working conditions. Most fringe benefits, like medical, dental and pension plans, are worked out on a national basis with other federal employees.

Conciliation boards are appointed after the parties have bargained in good faith, but have not reached an agreement.

CP Denies Ferry Retirement

A Canadian Pacific spokesman in Vancouver today denied that the Princess Patricia will be retired after this year's Vancouver-Alaska sailing season.

He contradicted statements made by Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst that, just as Canadian National will be retiring the Prince George after the 1975 season, the Princess Patricia's days are also numbered.

Gorst is chairman of the advisory committee, set up after the provincial government's recent purchase of the CP's Princess Marguerite and 8.5 acres of Inner Harbor property.

The CP spokesman said, although the Princess Patricia is of the same vintage as the Prince George, she is in excellent condition with lots of good service capability left in her.

"Nobody is a crystal ballgazer but we do not see this as our last season," the spokesman said, "We sure hope to be in this business for a few years to come."

Her leaving marked the end of an era in which CP ships, berthed in Victoria, were well-known around these waters.

She arrived here June 10, 1959, undergoing a $1 million conversion in 1962 for her duties as an Alaskan cruise ship.

With berthing in Vancouver, it is highly likely that in future work on her will be done at the North Vancouver Burrard shipyard instead of the Yarrow shipyard in Victoria.

The princesses left in service between Vancouver Island and Vancouver are of a lesser breed — geared more toward trucks, trailers and other commercial traffic.

There's the Princess of Vancouver that plies between Nanaimo and Vancouver, the Carrier Princess that's used on the Swartz Bay-Vancouver run, filling in with a run from Nanaimo to Vancouver in the summer, and the Trailer Princess, which serves on the Swartz Bay-Vancouver run.

UDDERLY DELIGHTFUL

CONOVER, Wis. (UPI) — Who knows what a milk cow dreams of when her farmer straps her into a size 108 Bovine bra.

For 28 years, the Franksville Speciality Co. has been making bras for cows and has been selling about 5,000 of them annually, Dorothy Rice, president of the company said.

She believes her firm is the only one in the country manufacturing the bras, called Tamm Udder Supports.

Mrs. Rice said they prevent milkladen cows from stepping on their udders and losing milk. The largest size made is 108.

New Taiwan Leader Affable, Ruthless

By ROBERT WHYMANT
Manchester Guardian

TOKYO — Premier Chian Ching'-Kuo, the man who will continue to exercise effective control of Taiwan following the death of his father, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, is considered affable and genial in social contacts, tough and ruthless in dealing with political dissent, and perhaps by most islands and outsiders as an enigma.

Chiang' Ching-kuo, 65, has carried out the day-to-day running of the government for a long time because of his father's seclusion through illness and is firmly established as the island's leader. That is likely to continue and may well be formalized in the future when he might succeed new President C. K. Yen in a legal election.

Chiang Ching-kuo's highly varied career has contributed to an aura of mystery about him. A student radical who clashed with British police in Shanghai when he was only 15, he quickly became imbued with anti-colonialism. It spurred him to go to the Soviet Union for military and political schooling in the late 1920s, when his father was consolidating his leadership of China. He stayed 12 years in the Soviet Union, seven of them uncomfortably in Siberian coal mines for holding Trotskyist views. In 1937, disillusioned, he returned to China, with a Russian wife, and joined with his father in trying to eliminate Communists hiding out in Kianghsi Province.

That fight against the Communists has gone on for 40 years. When the Nationalists retreated to Taiwan in 1949 he used a pervasive and harsh security police apparatus to eliminate resistance from Communists and Taiwanese Nationalists. As deputy premir, during a visit to New York in 1970, he narrowly missed a bullet fired by a youth espousing Taiwanese independence. The incident served as a reminder of the dark side to a Nationalist government which has produced remarkable economic achievements on the island.

CHIANG CHING-KUO

Since he was appointed premier three years ago, Chiang has undertaken efforts to win the hearts of the 13 million native Taiwanese, who make up 85 per cent of the population but who find themselves under the administrative thumbs of the Chinese Nationalists who fled the mainland. The premier spread more cabinet positions and provincial offices among Taiwanese and launched a program to eradicate official abuses and corruption. He has also made conspicuous attempts to project a relaxed, less remote image through journeys to the countryside to talk to farmers and local officials.

Partly because of an innate staidness and shyness and unexplored twilight areas of his past he is still something of an unknown quantity. In this air of mystery rumors of secret negotiations between Chiang Ching-kuo and the mainland have constantly budded and flourished for brief periods.

Like his father, Premier Chiang officially embraces the Nationalist credo of an eventual return and conquest of mainland China. Whether this aggressive rhetoric was filial piety or strategic camouflage for conciliatory moves toward an arrangement with Peking may eventually be decided under Chinag'e stewardship.

Japanese foreign ministry sources, however, indicated Sunday that to expect any shift from Taiwan's "one China" stand in the direction of a "one China and an autonomous Taiwan" position was in the realm of wishful thinking.

For the more liberal elements in the Taiwan government, as well as political opponents, the passing of the Generalissimo may not be an unrelieved disaster. "The old man" as he was widely called, was described as stubborn and crotchety in his later years by one senior official with occasional access.

Despite his strong puritanical streaks, his son is apparently more amenable. Recently, in Taipei, I was told by one of the premier's close associates that they had a habit of strolling together through the city's markets and art galleries passing unnoticed in the crowds. There was a suggestion that Chinag was better attuned to reality than his father, but this did not mean, I was told emphatically, that he would ever moore the island to the mainland with Communist ropes.

The premier reiterated in a speech last Thursday that he would not negotiate with the Communists "in any form" and, given the anti-Communist attitudes he has helped instill on the island, any attempt to do so publicly might well provoke resistance.

(Fifth Part in 10)

The value of assignats, and the price of provisions differ much in different places . . . The price of wine is at the ratio of one sou in hard cash, for four livres in assignats. On the road from Douai to Calais, ten livres in assignats were paid in a tavern for two cups of coffee. For want of hands, horses and dung, the soil is generally in a very bad state of cultivation.

Picture of Paris. In every street, on every bridge, and in all public places, we meet with poor wretches, feeding on rotten herrings, black puddings and other unwholesome food, the smell of which is highly offensive. Amidst this afflicting spectacle blind fiddlers and ballad singers fill the air either with the Reveil du Peuple or the Hymn of the Marseillois. Here bands of jobbers and forestallers, throw into each other's hands, articles of trade, and raise their prices ten times above their original value, before they reach the last consumer. Alarmed at the consequences of their measures, government detaches against them brigades of soldiers who disperse them; but they assemble again at a short distance from the first place, and raise the prices of all commodities still higher. Owing to their boundless traffic, our ancient funds are sunk to a 20th of their former value, and all people of property are ruined. Robespierre, by his scaffolds, overturned the Empire, and scattered about the remnants of it; but the assignats have, since his death, accomplished the revolution and displaced everything. Ruin and revolution are the normal consequences of inflation. The German inflation of the early 1920s prepared the way for the Nazis: the French inflation of the 1790s is interwoven with the French Revolution, and indeed with the terror — many of those guillotined were sentenced for breaches of the law of the maximum, that is, price control. The present world inflation, even at its present stage, has shaken confidence not only in individual governments, but in regimes. Even in Britain and the United States democracy is questioned as it has not been since the years of the slump and the rise of the great dictatorships.

Change Accelerated

There seem to be a number of reasons for this revolutionary tendency of inflation. To start with, inflation accelerates social change; it takes from the weak capital owner and gives to the strong; it takes from the weak trade unionist and gives to the strong. Changes of social and economic balance, which might happen anyway, happen faster than society can readily adapt to them.

Yet inflation does not only accelerate these changes, it also distorts them. In business, inflation rewards successful speculation disproportionately to successful production. In Nineteenth-Century Britain the great fortunes of the new men were made in industry, in coal, in steel, in tobacco, in shipbuilding, in shipping and so on. There were great property fortunes, but for the most part they were made by existing landowners as the result of development of land they already owned.

In late Twentieth-Century Britain the new fortunes are conspicuous in speculative finance, in property, in property related retailing, but new industrial fortunes are far from common. The reason for this is simple. Despite the risks of inflation, including the recurrent risk of liquidity crises, fortunes can be made in an inflationary time simply by skill in balancing borrowed money against appreciating assets. In a stable money period there is no automatic appreciation of assets, and they will therefore tend to rise in value only if there is an improvement in their real productivity. With stable money you have to be creative; with inflation you only have to be clever, or lucky.

Diverts, Disturbs

So inflation not only accelerates, but diverts and disturbs economic change. In so doing it throws up successful speculators who become the object of envy and hatred. Those whom inflation is ruining regard those who make great fortunes from inflation as the men who have ruined them. We have such figures in our own time. The United States has suffered in particular from simple fraud on a colossal scale; Mr. Robert Vesco is only the most conspicuous example.

Of the French inflation, Professor White observes, in somewhat romantic language: "From this general distress arising from the development and collapse of 'fiat' money in France, there was, indeed, one exception. In Paris and a few of the other great cities, men like Tallien, of the heartless, debauched, luxurious, speculator, contractor and stock gambler class, had risen above the ruins of the multitudes of smaller fortunes. Tallien, one of the worst demagogue "reformers," and a certain number of men like him, had been skillful enough to become millionaires, while their dupes, who had clamored for issues of paper money had become paupers."

A Few Empires

The scene that is described in Professor Golo Mann's History of Germany since 1789 is much the same, though the inflation is in a different country and century: "Those who were economically strong bought up the weak; German heavy industry, which even before 1914 had been concentrated in fewer hands than any other in the world, was reduced to a few empires. One of these — that of Hugo Stinnes — assumed dimensions the like of which had never been seen before, not even in America, growing as the mark depreciated. Goods were produced cheaply and cheap goods were brought onto the world market. Those who knew how to speculate, to buy and sell at the right moment, were able to live well and spent their easily-made profits freely. Shop windows glittered and turnover was high, new American dances were tried out in crowded places of entertainment while politicians drivelled contentedly about misery and lost honor. Meanwhile most people suffered real misery, the old, the pensioners, those who did not know how to speculate, and all those who worked for a wage and owned nothing."

One sees how the successful speculator, the Stinnes, the Tallien, becomes such a focus of hatred that sober historians, writing long after the event, still write about him in highlly emotional language. This resentment is felt even more strongly at the time by those who have suffered from inflation, the great majority, against those successfully manipulate inflation to their own advantage, the small minority.

In the case of Germany, this resentment was largely turned away from the class of industrial financiers like Stinnes and came to be concentrated, as a result of Nazi propaganda, on the Jews. In Germany, as elsewhere, the Jewish community had played an important part in banking and merchanting. German Jewish banks and other businesses were among the most respectable and reliable institutions of imperial Germany. Among those successful speculators who danced so inappropriately to jazz tunes in the Berlin restaurants of 1923, there were no doubt Jews, and perhaps many Jews, to be found. Money is after all the commodity in which bankers trade, and when money explodes, more bankers than ordinary people will be able to defend themselves against it, or take advantage of it.

Jews Blamed

The result is too terrible to contemplate. The myth came to be believed that the Jews had profited from the inflation by which honest Germans — forgetting about Stinnes — had been ruined. The identification of the German Jewish community as an exploiting and alien group dates from the period of the inflation and contrasts with the ultra-patriotism of the German Jewish community in the first world war (even Freud started that war as something close to an Austra-Hungarian jingo). Although the inflation is not by any means the only root of German anti-Semitism, there is a direct chain of causation from the German inflation, through the coming to power of the Nazis, to the final solution and the extermination camps. The inordinancy of money led to the inordinancy of anti-semitism.

A similar link between inflation and anti-semitism is to be found in the French Revolution.

This is not a reason for thinking that in Britain or the United States, if things progress so far, the present inflation is likely to end in anti-semitism; that indeed seems one of the least likely of outcomes. It does, however, show what a disintegrating force in society inflation is bound to be. In this way, though not in all ways, it is worse than a great slump; a slump may leave some people still well-to-do, but it makes most people poorer in degree, the rich less rich and the poor poorer. An inflation distinguishes; some of the rich become richer, and some of the poor become richer too—those with strong unions. On the other hand some of the rich become poor, and some of the poor become paupers, and the number of those damaged in the end greatly exceeds the number who benefit; inflation is a perfect recipe for making people hate their neighbors.

There is also a general law of inflation that the longer and more extreme an inflation the smaller the proportion of those who can protect themselves against it. We have seen this cycle in Britain, so far as capital is concerned. When inflation is in its early stages, running, say, at below 5 per cent, most capital owners can protect themselves against it. Even at that stage, fixed interest stocks will not provide protection.

In the first stage, however, the equity investor can look with supercilious self-confidence at the troubles of the fixed interest investor. He feels himself safe, and so in the gentle inflation of the 1950s he was. Then comes a stage when the inflation is no longer supporting real expansion of the economy, but is causing increasing distress. The government resorts to price controls, and tries at least to limit the increase in the money supply. Pressures for higher wages are very strong, and confidence deteriorates.

At this point the equity investor finds that he cannot sell his shares to advantage; his gains melt away, he is making losses on some of his best investments. A table of German stock market prices during the inflation shows that equities are not a good hedge; they collapsed completely, though by the end of the inflation in November, 1923, they had recovered to their post-war level of May, 1919, expressed in terms of constant wholesale prices. However, the shareholder had gone through a period when he had apparently lost nearly 90 per cent of his purchasing power on a post-war comparison and over 96 per cent on a pre-war one.

Adjustment Needed

In assessing the behavior of stocks during the inflation, the clearest picture is given after a deflating adjustment. In this case, prices are adjusted on two bases — the foreign exchange rate of the dollar (gold prices) and wholesale prices. (see table).

The falls in this table may seem less extraordinary when it is reflected that in constant gold terms, The Financial Times index is now at about 10 per cent of its 1968 high point; Old Consols, that is the British Government's 2½ per cent undated stock, stand at less than 1 per cent of the pre-1914 — or indeed pre-1931 — parity; the price in the market, August, 1974, stands between 15 and 16, and the gold price is 17 times the pre-1914 Mint price. This was the great stock on which prudent Victorians relied for their ultimate form of security; its history can be traced back to 1751. Relatively few private individuals still hold Old Consols, but insurance companies and pension funds do hold them for their high running yield; the loss of 99 per cent of their gold purchasing power has represented a corresponding loss of real purchasing power, mainly concentrated on the elderly and on widows.

Fourth Blizzard Since 'Spring' Smothers Prairies

Times News Services

"Most people are getting pretty sick of this," a North Dakota police captain remarked Tuesday as the fourth winter storm since "spring" swept across the U.S. northern plains and Canada's prairie provinces.

Weather advisories remained in effect for southern and central Alberta and southern Saskatchewan today after a snowstorm Tuesday dumped up to seven inches of snow, creating treacherous highway conditions, cutting power to several Saskatchewan communities, and forcing the closure of some schools.

A spokesman at the Regina weather office said, however, that the storm was expected "to peter out," with only snowflurries expected today.

He reiterated a warning issued earlier by the weather office that road conditions were treacherous and caution was required by motorists.

"Temperatures are holding just below freezing across southern Saskatchewan, and will continue to do so tomorrow," he said. Wet snow and freezing precipitation, combined with the temperatures, have left "solid sheets of ice" on roads.

The public foreaster in Edmonton agreed that "the worst of it will be over with today," but said he would keep the Alberta weather advisory in effect at least until Tuesday night.

Edmonton city police estimated there had been between 35 and 40 minor traffic accidents Tuesday morning because of weather and road conditions. And RCMP at Stony Plain, just west of the city, said there had been two accidents involving school buses — one of them on a district road three miles from Stony Plain and the other on highway 16 four miles east of Spruce Grove. There were no injuries and in both cases the school buses were just beginning their run and had not yet picked up their passengers.

The Saskatchewan Power Corp. reported that by noon Tuesday power had been restored to all but two communities in southeastern Saskatchewan.

Medicine Hat and Coronation had been the most heavily-hit by new snow, reporting seven inches for the last 30 hours. Lethbridge and Brooks each had five inches of new snow, while Rocky Mountain House reported three inches.

Coronation had the most snow on the ground — 29 inches including the fresh snowfall, the Edmonton weather office said.

I'M AN ADDICT—ACCUSED

COLEBERT

Daniel Bradley Cain, a 19-year-old self-confessed heroin addict, was remanded in custody to Thursday when he appeared in Victoria provincial court this morning on a two-count Colwood RCMP charge of unlawful escape from William Head prison March 22 and being unlawfully at large.

Crown prosecutor Clarence Vause said further charges will be laid at that time.

Cain, who elected trial by magistrate on both counts, said he would seek legal advice before pleading.

Appearing pale and nervous in the packed courtroom, and frequently fidgeting as he stood in the witness box, Cain asked to see a doctor.

Judge Harold Alder asked him what the problem was and he replied: "I'm a heroin addict."

The court appearance was the sequel to a day of high drama, anxiety and confusion on Tuesday, when a young man identified by police as a William Head escaper became the fugitive in a seven-hour man hunt which included a high-speed car chase, exchange of gunfire, barricaded defiance in a Fairfield-area home, abduction of hostages and, finally, capture. (See story, pictures on Page 13).

Key figures in the scenario were a young mother, Mrs. Diane Smith, of 1116 Leonard, and her three-year-old daughter Emily, who for more than two and a half hours were the hostages of the armed man — first in their home and then on a car ride in which the suspect managed to give his pursuers the slip.

An alert off-duty policeman, Oak Bay Constable Robert Faith, was the catalyst in the chain of events that started at about 10 a.m.

Shopping in Gordon's Sporting Goods, 1030 Hillside, Faith saw a youth matching Cain's description buying a box of shotgun shells. He followed him, saw him enter a parked car and noted the licence number which he telephoned to Victoria police headquarters.

A little less than an hour later, city Constables Peter Talavs and Rick Mitchell saw the car heading south on Douglas near Bay.

The high-speed chase that ensued took in Caledonia, Quadra, Balmoral and Cook. Near the Cook-Oxford intersection the driver of the pursued car turned and pointed what appeared to be a handgun at the police cruiser.

At Cook and May the fleeing vehicle collided with a car driven by Andrew Modos, 152 Cambridge, who was slightly injured, before it struck a tree and then a telephone pole.

Abandoning the wrecked car, in which police later

Cabbie Bailed Out

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The taxi dispatcher radioed cabbie Ron Colebert there was a fare for him at 703 Esquimalt Rd. — and Colebert drove innocently into the final act of Monday's drama-packed police manhunt.

The fare proved to be a young man with longish hair who came out of the apartment block and got into the front seat of the cab.

He wanted to go to Alderman Road, about half a mile away, but he also wanted to tell Colebert how to get there, instructing him to turn this way and then that.

"I said, 'make up your mind where you want to go,' " the taxi driver recalled later.

Colebert said he knew there was a police manhunt on but he didn't connect his passenger with the search.

It was 4:30 p.m. and a police helicopter was still swinging low over Esquimalt and Victoria West streets, in radio contact with the dozen or so police cars, marked and unmarked, scattered through the area.

The police were looking for a robber suspect they identified as Daniel Bradley Cain, 19.

Meanwhile, Robert Morgan, 46, a Victoria West resident, had been following the case all day on his police band radio. He was driving the area with his son, Dale, 17, "just keeping an eye open."

They spotted a cab driving slowly towards Craigflower and as they passed it and saw the passesger, Morgan told his son:

"That's the guy."

They turned and followed a block behind and then Morgan spotted an unmarked police car coming up from behind. He pulled over and let the car draw even, honked it to a halt and told a detective: "Get on that cab, that's the guy."

Unknown to Colebert and his passenger, the officers had been paying particular attention to taxi cabs. Their suspect was thought to be on foot after he had fled from a car he had stolen, abandoning a mother and baby daughter he had taken hostage five hours earlier.

Driving down Raynor, Colebert's passenger suddenly said there were police ahead.

"Where? I don't see any," Colebert replied.

But the cabbie did see the pistol his passenger then produced. And the passenger told him to drive around the police ahead.

It was now 4:40 p.m. at the intersection of Raynor and Craigflower. And the police weren't just ahead. They were behind in cars and converging

Four Key Factors In Turner Budget

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner Tuesday promised a new budget at the earliest possible date to cope with the most serious economic problems Canada has faced in 15 years.

Turner indicated the budget will be brought down before the end of May, and observers automatically assumed it will contain tax reductions to stimulate consumer spending.

Key factors that will shape the budget contents were described by Turner as:

—U.S. tax and energy policy.

—Any agreement arising from the federal-provincial conference on oil and gas prices.

—The possible effect the government will have on prices and incomes through its consensus program; and —A further assessment of the international situation.

It is two months since Turner touched off speculation on a new budget by admitting that the recession in the U.S. and Canada, and in some other countries, was having a deeper effect on the Canadian economy than had been anticipated at the time of the November budget.

Since then unemployment has worsened, statistics have shown that economic growth in Canada is in decline, and Canada's inflation has continued to run at the double-digit level while U.S. price increases have tapered off.

Perhaps the final straw in Turner's decision-making came yesterday when Statistics Canada reported that unemployment had increased in March to a seosonally adjusted rate of 7.2 per cent, up .5 from the previous month.

When he brought down his November budget Turner forecast a growth rate of about four per cent, in real

CUPE Hits Lum Charge

Saanich employees' union today denied responsibility for jamming sewers as charged Tuesday by Mayor Ed Lum.

"I deny it is being done by CUPE members," said Jim Brett, president of Local 374, Canadian Union of Public Employees. "I deny all charges by Mayor Lum."

Brett offered an explanation for the incidents, which have caused sewage backups and damage to homes in the Gordon Head area, but Lum said the reasoning was unsatisfactory.

According to one of the members of Local 374, whose normal work is in sewers, a former contractor employed by Saanich made a practice of putting chicken wire cages in sewer lines to catch foreign material during construction to prevent it from plugging the system.

Some of these, left in the pipes, could break loose and be carried downstream to lodge in strategic points, with the result that blockage could back up sewage into homes, Brett said.

But Lum pointed out the traps or cages have the appearance of being jammed into pipes with large rocks or sacks of stones on either side. One rock was nearly the size of the pipe itself, he said.

The mayor acknowledged the wire traps could have

IDI FOR QUEEN?

KAMPALA (UPI) — President Idi Amin today offered himself as head of the British commonwealth in place of Queen Elizabeth because of what he called Britain's economic collapse.

Uganda Radio quoted Amin as saying, "The British Empire doesn't exist, and the British economy has collapsed which has made Britain unable to maintain its position as leader of the Commonwealth.

"I offer myself to be appointed head of the commonwealth in view of the success of my own economic revolution in Uganda."

The offer to succeed the queen was made in a telegram to commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith. Amin said that he would not attend the forthcoming commonwealth prime ministers conference in Jamaica but offered to host the 1977 meeting.

The commonwealth secretariat in London said it had received the telegram.

NEWS BRIEFS

Deeper Recession?

WASHINGTON (WP) — Former U.S. federal reserve board governor Andrew F. Brimmer Tuesday predicted that the recession would deepen beyond administration expectations, and called on the federal reserve to push the nation's banks into a more liberal lending policy.

Brimmer said that the deteriorating economic situation would result in average rate of unemployment at 9.3 per cent this year, 8.9 per cent in 1976, and 7.3 per cent in 1977. (The March unemployment level was 8.7 per cent.)

Portugal Bars U.S.

LISBON (UPI) — Portugal's leftwing government has barred the United States from using an American base in the Azores Islands to supply Israel during any new Middle East war. But Prime Minister Vasco Goncalves has promised to honor all of Portugal's past commitments to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

8 Leftists Hanged

SEOUL (UPI) — The South Korean government hanged eight leftists today on charges of orgainizing student demonstrations to overthrow President Park Chung-Hee. The justice ministry said the condemned men — alleged members of a leftist organization called the People's Revolution Party — were hanged this morning at Seoul Prison. Six officials witnessed the executions.

Oil Transfer Talks

NO HARBOR RUSH

A year ago today the three-acre Reid Centre site on wharf street was frozen by cabinet order-in-council, and the following month it was purchased by the provincial government.

Last week the province added nearly nine more acres to its Inner Harbor land holdings — and became the major owner of prime waterfront in the capital — when it acquired the Marathon Realty property below Belleville Street.

As times City Hall reporter Paul Moss notes in a Page 5 article today, the year separating these two events has been one of little or no visible progress, in terms of planning the harbor's future.

But that's a misleading impression, according to Resources Minister Robert Williams, who has apparently emerged as the No. 1 man in shaping our waterfront destiny.

Williams said Tuesday much preliminary technical work, including market research, has taken place since July last year, when the government's Inner Harbor consultant Rod Clack handed in his report following a well-attended public hearing.

A considerable amount of design work has also been undertaken by the government and by noted architect Arthur Erickson, the minister said.

"It's not something we want to rush into," he added. "A lot has been done in the background even if it doesn't look like it."

Williams said John Webster, who has been working in the lands department since the beginning of this year, was hired from Marathon Realty to co-ordinate all planning and development activities for the government's Inner Harbor holdings.

Asked if any legislation was in the offing with regard to harbor protection and development — as he indicated last summer — he replied that was more appropriately a matter for "other departments."

The minister wouldn't be more specific. "I don't know where it (legislation) stands in government priorities right now," he said. "It has been considered."

Posties Mull $68 Offer

OTTAWA (CP) — Letter Carriers' Union president Roger Decarie said today union leaders are still studying a conciliation report that proposes weekly raises to letter carriers totalling $68 over two years and, for now, have no intention of calling a strike.

The report was given last Monday to the union and government negotiators, but was not released until today. Should the union reject its proposals, a strike is legally possible April 14.

Pay raises proposed in the report, which was supported by the union nominee to the three-man conciliation board, would raise the weekly pay to letter carriers with three years' experience to $245.60 by July 1, 1976, from the current $177.60.

The conciliation report proposes a pay raise retroactive to Jan. 1 of 70 cents an hour; another 30 cents on July 1; a further 40 cents next Jan. 1 and a final increase of 30 cents on July 1, 1976. Letter carriers with three years' experience now get $4.44 hourly.

Total pay increases would be 38 per cent over two years, of which 15¾ per cent is immediately effective and dates back to Jan. 1.

PM, Premiers Join Battle On Future Energy Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — Eastern premiers opposed to higher oil and gas prices dug in their heels in determined style today as Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial leaders joined battle over future pricing policies at a national conference on energy and the economy.

If anything, attitudes appeared even tougher than advance publicity had indicated as Ontario Premier William Davis shifted his stand to opposing "any" increase from earlier resistance to a "substantial" increase.

"We will not support an increase at this time," he said, in determined tones. There was no applause from Trudeau and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed who both favor increases in the price of oil and gas, nor from Saskatchewan, which wants oil prices to rise higher than the current $6.50 a barrel.

Within a few minutes of the Davis statement, the Ontario premier was getting the kind of support he wanted from both premiers Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia, and more moderately, Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick, both opposed to any higher prices.

"We are not prepared to support further rip-offs by producing provinces and the government of Canada," Regan said to beaming approval by Premier Davis and a wry smile by Premier Lougheed.

Lougheed said the most important question facing the conference is the adequacy of a long-term energy supply for Canada and the prices necessary to achieve that goal.

In an opening statement Lougheed noted that Alberta had warned last year that unless incentives for oil exploration and development were improved there was a serious danger of a future shortage of oil.

The Alberta premier said the danger was dramatically confirmed in a National Energy Board report last November which indicated that starting in 1975 Canada's declining productive capacity would no longer be sufficient to supply it's total oil requirements.

The prospects of a future shortage in natural gas were also increasingly evident, he said.

B.C.'s Premier Dave Barrett suggested today the price for natural gas exported to the United States should double to $2 a thousand cubic feet by Nov. 1.

Reiterating his complaints that Canadian gas is underpriced in the U.S. market, the premier proposed three increases in the price from the current $1 level.

It should go to $1.40 a thousand cubic feet May 1, $1.60 on Aug. 1 and to $2 by Nov. 1, the premier told the meeting.

If approved, the increase would add $1 billion to the annual gas bill for the United States, which now imports about one trillion cubic feet of gas from Canada each year.

Premier Barrett said American producers already are selling intra-state gas, supplies produced and consumed within the borders of a single state — for between $1.50 and $2 for 1,000 cubic feet.

"British Columbia should be charging a minimum of $2 for its gas," the premier said.

Prime Minister Trudeau called for restraint by business and labor to fight inflation but said the price of oil and natural gas should go up.

He steered clear of saying exactly how much the federal government believes should be added to the frozen price of petroleum products.

Much of his speech dealt with the economy and the federal government's efforts to reach a consensus with industry and labor on how best to battle the problems of inflation.

Political Row Flares at Oscar Show

Times News Services

LOS ANGELES — The Academy awards Tuesday night were again used as a platform for a political statement. Burt Schneider, co-producer of the winning feature documentary, Hearts and Minds, a film about the Vietnam war, read a telegram he said was from the chief Viet Cong representative in Paris, Dinh Da Thi.

Schneider said the telegram offered "greetings of friendship to all the American people" and asked him to "transmit to all our friends in America our recognition all that they have done on behalf of peace . . ."

Later in the show master of ceremonies Frank Sinatra said he had been asked to make a statement on behalf of the Motion Picture Academy, saying: "we are not responsible for any political statements made on this program, and we're sorry they had to take place this evening."

Master of ceremonies Bob Hope said he received five telegrams from television viewers upset by Schneider's remarks.

Hope then approached Sinatra, read the disclaimer.

With the agreement of Academy director Walter Mirisch, Hope scrawled out a message on the back of one of his telegrams reading: "We are not responsible for any political references on this program and we are sorry they had to take place this evening."

Winners of the Vicotria Times - CJVI 900 "Visit to the Hollywood Stars" contest will be announced in tomorrow's Times. For list of awards see Page 3.

Hope said that when Sinatra balked at reading the message in the name of the Academy, he told him:: "If you don't read it, I will."

Sinatra then agreed to do it. but Sinatra's action brought an angry riposte from Shirley MacLaine, the only woman master of ceremonies.

She said she told Sinatra: "Why did you do that? You said you are speaking on behalf of the Academy, and I'm a member of the Academy."

Asked if she agreed with Schneider reading the telegram, Miss MacLaine said: "It seemed like a very positive, friendly telegram to me."

Miss MacLaine's brother, Warren Beatty, who had just presented the best movie award, also chided Sinatra, calling him: "You old Republican, you."

Participants said the incident climaxed with Miss MacLaine and Sintra still angry with each other as they were supposed to go into a song and dance number. That's Entertainment, with Hope and Sammy Davis to end the show.

Sinatra had to be dragged into the number by Davis tugging at his coat sleeve, they said.

I'M AN ADDICT—ACCUSED

COLEBERT

Daniel Bradley Cain, a 19-year-old self-confessed heroin addict, was remanded in custody to Thursday when he appeared in Victoria provincial court this morning on a two-count Colwood RCMP charge of unlawful escape from William Head prison March 22 and being unlawfully at large.

Crown prosecutor Clarence Vause said further charges will be laid at that time.

Cain, who elected trial by magistrate on both counts, said he would seek legal advice before pleading.

Appearing pale and nervous in the packed courtroom, and frequently fidgeting as he stood in the witness box, Cain asked to see a doctor.

Judge Harold Alder asked him what the problem was and he replied: "I'm a heroin addict."

The court appearance was the sequel to a day of high drama, anxiety and confusion on Tuesday, when a young man identified by police as a William Head escaper became the fugitive in a seven-hour man hunt which included a high-speed car chase, exchange of gunfire, barricaded defiance in a Fairfield-area home, abduction of hostages and, finally, capture. (See story, pictures on Page 13).

Key figures in the scenario were a young mother, Mrs. Diana Smith, of 1116 Leonard, and her three-year-old daughter Emily, who for more than two and a half hours were the hostages of the armed man — first in their home and then on a car ride in which the suspect managed to give his pursuers the slip.

An alert off-duty policeman, Oak Bay Constable Robert Faith, was the catalyst in the chain of events that started at about 10 a.m.

Shopping in Gordon's Sporting Goods, 1030 Hillside, Faith saw a youth matching Cain's description buying a box of shotgun shells. He followed him, saw him enter a parked car and noted the licence number which he telephoned to Victoria police headquarters.

A little less than an hour later, city Constables Peter Talavs and Rick Mitchell saw the car heading south on Douglas near Bay.

The high-speed chase that ensued took in Caledonia, Quadra, Balmoral and Cook. Near the Cook-Oxford intersection the driver of the pursued car turned and pointed what appeared to be a hand-gun at the police cruiser.

At Cook and May the fleeing vehicle collided with a car driven by Andrew Modos, 152 Cambridge, who was slightly injured, before it struck a tree and then a telephone pole.

Abandoning the wrecked car, in which police later

Cabbie Bailed Out

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The taxi dispatcher radioed cabbie Ron Colebert there was a fare for him at 703 Esquimalt Rd. — and Colebert drove innocently into the final act of Monday's drama-packed police manhunt.

The fare proved to be a young man with longish hair who came out of the apartment block and got into the front seat of the cab.

He wanted to go to Alderman Road, about half a mile away, but he also wanted to tell Colebert how to get there, instructing him to turn this way and then that.

"I said, 'make up your mind where you want to go,' " the taxi driver recalled later.

Colebert said he knew there was a police manhunt on but he didn't connect his passenger with the search.

It was 4:30 p.m. and a police helicopter was still swinging low over Esquimalt and Victoria West streets, in radio contact with the dozen or so police cars, marked and unmarked, scattered through the area.

The police were looking for a robber suspect they identified as Daniel Bradley Cain, 19.

Meanwhile, Robert Morgan, 46, a Victoria West resident, had been following the case all day on his police band radio. He was driving the area with his son, Dale, 17, "just keeping an eye open."

They spotted a cab driving slowly towards Craigflower and as they passed it and saw the passesger, Morgan told his son:

"That's the guy."

They turned and followed a block behind and then Morgan spotted an unmarked police car coming up from behind. He pulled over and let the car draw even, honked it to a halt and told a detective: "Get on that cab, that's the guy."

Unknown to Colebert and his passenger, the officers had been paying particular attention to taxi cabs. Their suspect was thought to be on foot after he had fled from a car he had stolen, abandoning a mother and baby daughter he had taken hostage five hours earlier.

Driving down Raynor, Colebert's passenger suddenly said there were police ahead.

"Where? I don't see any," Colebert replied.

But the cabbie did see the pistol his passenger then produced. And the passenger told him to drive around the police ahead.

It was now 4:40 p.m. at the intersection of Raynor and Craigflower. And the police weren't just ahead. They were behind in cars and converging

LONDON (Reuter) — Parliament voted by a big majority today in favor of keeping Britain in the European Common Market.

The vote by Parliament probably will influence many Britons to vote for continued membership in the Market when they make the final decision in a referendum expected to be held June 5.

Tax Cut Likely In Turner Budget

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner Tuesday promised a new budget at the earliest possible date to cope with the most serious economic problems Canada has faced in 15 years.

Turner indicated the budget will be brought down before the end of May, and observers automatically assumed it will contain tax reductions to stimulate consumer spending.

Key factors that will shape the budget contents were described by Turner as:

—U.S. tax and energy policy.

—Any agreement arising from the federal-provincial conference on oil and gas prices.

—The possible effect the government will have on prices and incomes through its consensus program; and —A further assessment of the international situation.

It is two months since Turner touched off speculation on a new budget by admitting that the recession in the U.S. and Canada, and in some other countries, was having a deeper effect on the Canadian economy than had been anticipated at the time of the November budget.

Since then unemployment has worsened, statistics have shown that economic growth in Canada is in decline, and Canada's inflation has continued to run at the double-digit level while U.S. price increases have tapered off.

Perhaps the final straw in Turner's decision-making came yesterday when Statistics Canada reported that unemployment had increased in March to a seasonally adjusted rate of 7.2 per cent, up .5 from the previous month.

When he brought down his November budget Turner forecast a growth rate of about four per cent, in real

Inner Harbor future—progress or stagnation? (Bill Halkett photo)

NO HARBOR RUSH

A year ago today the three-acre Reid Centre site on wharf street was frozen by cabinet order-in-council, and the following month it was purchased by the provincial government.

Last week the province added nearly nine more acres to its Inner Harbor land holdings — and became the major owner of prime waterfront in the capital — when it acquired the Marathon Realty property below Belleville Street.

As Times City all reporter Paul Moss notes in a Page 5 article today, the year separating these two events has been one of little or no visible progress, in terms of planning the harbor's future.

But that's a misleading impression, according to Resources Minister Robert Williams, who has apparently emerged as the No. 1 man in shaping our waterfront destiny.

Williams said Tuesday much preliminary technical work, including market research, has taken place since July last year, when the government's Inner Harbor consultant Rod Clack handed in his report following a well-attended public hearing.

A considerable amount of design work has also been undertaken by the government and by noted architect Arthur Erickson, the minister said.

"It's not something we want to rush into," he added. "A lot has been done in the background even if it doesn't look like it."

Williams said John Webster, who has been working in the lands department since the beginning of this year, was hired from Marathon Realty to co-ordinate all planning and development activities for the government's Inner Harbor holdings.

Asked if any legislation was in the offing with regard to harbor protection and development — as he indicated last summer — he replied that was more appropriately a matter for "other departments."

The minister wouldn't be more specific. "I don't know where it (legislation) stands in government priorities right now," he said. "It has been considered."

CUPE Hits Lum Charge

Saanich employees' union today denied responsibility for jamming sewers as charged Tuesday by Mayor Ed Lum.

"I deny it is being done by CUPE members," said Jim Brett, president of Local 374, Canadian Union of Public Employees. "I deny all charges by Mayor Lum."

Brett offered an explanation for the incidents, which have caused sewage backups and damage to homes in the Gordon Head area, but Lum said the reasoning was unsatisfactory.

According to one of the members of Local 374, whose normal work is in sewers, a former contractor employed by Saanich made a practice of putting chicken wire cages in sewer lines to catch foreign material during construction to prevent it from plugging the system.

Some of these, left in the pipes, could break loose and be carried downstream to lodge in strategic points, with the result that blockage could back up sewage into homes, Brett said.

But Lum pointed out the traps or cages have the appearance of being jammed into pipes with large rocks or sacks of stones on either side. One rock was nearly the size of the pipe itself, he said.

The mayor acknowledged the wire traps could have

IDI FOR QUEEN?

KAMPALA (UPI) — President Idi Amin today offered himself as head of the British commonwealth in place of Queen Elizabeth because of what he called Britain's economic collapse.

Uganda Radio quoted Amin as saying, "The British Empire doesn't exist, and the British economy has collapsed which has made Britain unable to maintain its position as leader of the Commonwealth.

"I offer myself to be appointed head of the commonwealth in view of the success of my own economic revolution in Uganda."

The offer to succeed the queen was made in a telegram to commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith. Amin said that he would not attend the forthcoming commonwealth prime ministers conference in Jamaica but offered to host the 1977 meeting.

The commonwealth secretariat in London said it had received the telegram.

NEWS BRIEFS

Deeper Recession?

WASHINGTON (WP) — Former U.S. federal reserve board governor Andrew F. Brimmer Tuesday predicted that the recession would deepen beyond administration expectations, and called on the federal reserve to push the nation's banks into a more liberal lending policy.

Brimmer said that the deteriorating economic situation would result in average rate of unemployment at 9.3 per cent this year, 8.9 per cent in 1976, and 7.3 per cent in 1977. (The March unemployment level was 8.7 per cent.)

Portugal Bars U.S.

LISBON (UPI) — Portugal's leftwing government has barred the United States from using an American base in the Azores Islands to supply Israel during any new Middle East war. But Prime Minister Vasco Goncalves has promised to honor all of Portugal's past commitments to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

8 Leftists Hanged

SEOUL (UPI) — The South Korean government hanged eight leftists today on charges of orgainizing student demonstrations to overthrow President Park Chung-Hee. The justice ministry said the condemned men — alleged members of a leftist organization called the People's Revolution Party — were hanged this morning at Seoul Prison. Six officials witnessed the executions.

Oil Transfer Talks

Posties Mull $68 Offer

OTTAWA (CP) — Letter Carriers' Union president Roger Decarie said today union leaders are still studying a conciliation report that proposes weekly raises to letter carriers totalling $68 over two years and, for now, have no intention of calling a strike.

The report was given last Monday to the union and government negotiators, but was not released until today. Should the union reject its proposals, a strike is legally possible April 14.

Pay raises proposed in the report, which was supported by the union nominee to the three-man conciliation board, would raise the weekly pay to letter carriers with three years' experience to $245.60 by July 1, 1976, from the current $177.60.

The conciliation report proposes a pay raise retroactive to Jan. 1 of 70 cents an hour; another 30 cents on July 1; a further 40 cents next Jan. 1 and a final increase of 30 cents on July 1, 1976. Letter carriers with three years' experience now get $4.44 hourly.

Total pay increases would be 38 per cent over two years, of which 15¾ per cent is immediately effective and dates back to Jan. 1.

PM, Premiers Join Battle On Future Energy Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — Eastern premiers opposed to higher oil and gas prices dug in their heels in determined style today as Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial leaders joined battle over future pricing policies at a national conference on energy and the economy.

If anything, attitudes appeared even tougher than advance publicity had indicated as Ontario Premier William Davis shifted his stand to opposing "any" increase from earlier resistance to a "substantial" increase.

"We will not support an increase at this time," he said, in determined tones. There was no applause from Trudeau and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed who both favor increases in the price of oil and gas, nor from Saskatchewan, which wants oil prices to rise higher than the current $6.50 a barrel.

Within a few minutes of the Davis statement, the Ontario premier was getting the kind of support he wanted from both premiers Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia, and more moderately, Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick, both opposed to any higher prices.

"We are not prepared to support further rip-offs by producing provinces and the government of Canada," Regan said to beaming approval by Premier Davis and a wry smile by Premier Lougheed.

Lougheed said the most important question facing the conference is the adequacy of a long-term energy supply for Canada and the prices necessary to achieve that goal.

In an opening statement Lougheed noted that Alberta had warned last year that unless incentives for oil exploration and development were improved there was a serious danger of a future shortage of oil.

The Alberta premier said the danger was dramatically confirmed in a National Energy Board report last November which indicated that starting in 1975 Canada's declining productive capacity would no longer be sufficient to supply it's total oil requirements.

The prospects of a future shortage in natural gas were also increasingly evident, he said.

B.C.'s Premier Dave Barrett suggested today the price for natural gas exported to the United States should double to $2 a thousand cubic feet by Nov. 1.

Reiterating his complaints that Canadian gas is underpriced in the U.S. market, the premier proposed three increases in the price from the current $1 level.

It should go to $1.40 a thousand cubic feet May 1, $1.60 on Aug. 1 and to $2 by Nov. 1, the premier told the meeting.

If approved, the increase would add $1 billion to the annual gas bill for the United States, which now imports about one trillion cubic feet of gas from Canada each year.

Premier Barrett said American producers already are selling intra-state gas, supplies produced and consumed within the borders of a single state — for between $1.50 and $2 for 1,000 cubic feet.

"British Columbia should be charging a minimum of $2 for its gas," the premier said.

Prime Minister Trudeau called for restraint by business and labor to fight inflation but said the price of oil and natural gas should go up.

He steered clear of saying exactly how much the federal government believes should be added to the frozen price of petroleum products.

Much of his speech dealt with the economy and the federal government's efforts to reach a consensus with industry and labor on how best to battle the problems of inflation.

Political Row Flares at Oscar Show

Times News Services

LOS ANGELES — The Academy awards Tuesday night were again used as a platform for a political statement.

Burt Schneider, co-producer of the winning feature documentary, Hearts and Minds, a film about the Vietnam war, read a telegram he said was from the chief Viet Cong representative in Paris, Dinh Da Thi.

Schneider said the telegram offered "greetings of friendship to all the American people" and asked him to "transmit to all our friends in America our recognition of all that they have done on behalf of peace . . ."

Later in the show master of ceremonies Frank Sinatra said he had been asked to make a statement on behalf of the Motion Picture Academy, saying: "We are not responsible for any political statements made on this program, and we're sorry they had to take place this evening."

Master of ceremonies Bob Hope said he received five telegrams from television viewers upset by Schneider's remarks.

Hope then approached Sinatra, read the disclaimer.

With the agreement of Academy director Walter Mirisch, Hope scrawled out a message on the back of one of his telegrams reading: "We are not responsible for any political references on this program and we are sorry they had to take place this evening."

Winners of the Victoria Times - CJVI 900 "Visit to the Hollywood Stars" contest will be announced in tomorrow's Times. For list of awards see Page 3.

Hope said that when Sinatra balked at reading the message in the name of the Academy, he told him:: "If you don't read it, I will."

Sinatra then agreed to do it. but Sinatra's action brought an angry riposte from Shirley MacLaine, the only woman master of ceremonies.

She said she told Sinatra: "Why did you do that? You said you are speaking on behalf of the Academy, and I'm a member of the Academy."

Asked if she agreed with Schneider reading the telegram, Miss MacLaine said: "It seemed like a very positive, friendly telegram to me."

Miss MacLaine's brother, Warren Beatty, who had just presented the best movie award, also chided Sinatra, calling him: "You old Republican, you."

Participants said the incident climaxed with Miss MacLaine and Sintra still angry with each other as they were supposed to go into a song and dance number, That's Entertainment, with Hope and Sammy Davis to end the show.

Sinatra had to be dragged into the number by Davis tugging at his coat sleeve, they said.

I'M AN ADDICT—ACCUSED

COLEBERT

Daniel Bradley Cain, a 19-year-old self-confessed heroin addict, was remanded in custody to Thursday when he appeared in Victoria provincial court this morning on a two-count Colwood RCMP charge of unlawful escape from William Head prison March 22 and being unlawfully at large.

Crown prosecutor Clarence Vause said further charges will be laid at that time.

Cain, who elected trial by magistrate on both counts, said he would seek legal advice before pleading.

Appearing pale and nervous in the packed courtroom, and frequently fidgeting as he stood in the witness box, Cain asked to see a doctor.

Judge Harold Alder asked him what the problem was and he replied: "I'm a heroin addict."

The court appearance was the sequel to a day of high drama, anxiety and confusion on Tuesday, when a young man identified by police as a William Head escaper became the fugitive in a seven-hour man hunt which included a high-speed car chase, exchange of gunfire, barricaded defiance in a Fairfield-area home, abduction of hostages and, finally, capture. (See story, pictures on Page 13).

Key figures in the scenario were a young mother, Mrs. Diana Smith, of 1116 Leonard, and her three-year-old daughter Emily, who for more than two and a half hours were the hostages of the armed man first in their home and then on a car ride in which the suspect managed to give his pursuers the slip.

An alert off-duty policeman, Oak Bay Constable Robert Faith, was the catalyst in the chain of events that started at about 10 a.m.

Shopping in Gordon's Sporting Goods, 1030 Hillside, Faith saw a youth matching Cain's description buying a box of shotgun shells. He followed him, saw him enter a parked car and noted the licence number which he telephoned to Victoria police headquarters.

A little less than an hour later, city Constables Peter Talavs and Rick Mitchell saw the car heading south on Douglas near Bay.

The high-speed chase that ensued took in Caledonia, Quadra, Balmoral and Cook. Near the Cook-Oxford intersection the driver of the pursued car turned and pointed what appeared to be a handgun at the police cruiser.

At Cook and May the fleeing vehicle collided with a car driven by Andrew Modos, 152 Cambridge, who was slightly injured, before it struck a tree and then a telephone pole.

Abandoning the wrecked car, in which police later

Cabbie Bailed Out

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The taxi dispatcher radioed cabbie Ron Colebert there was a fare for him at 703 Esquimalt Rd. — and Colebert drove innocently into the final act of Monday's drama-packed police manhunt.

The fare proved to be a young man with longish hair who came out of the apartment block and got into the front seat of the cab.

He wanted to go to Alderman Road, about half a mile away, but he also wanted to tell Colebert how to get there, instructing him to turn this way and then that.

"I said, 'make up your mind where you want to go,' " the taxi driver recalled later.

Colebert said he knew there was a police manhunt on but he didn't connect his passenger with the search.

It was 4:30 p.m. and a police helicopter was still swinging low over Esquimalt and Victoria West streets, in radio contact with the dozen or so police cars, marked and unmarked, scattered through the area.

The police were looking for a robber suspect they identified as Daniel Bradley Cain, 19.

Meanwhile, Robert Morgan, 46, a Victoria West resident, had been following the case all day on his police band radio. He was driving the area with his son, Dale, 17, "just keeping an eye open."

They spotted a cab driving slowly towards Craigflower and as they passed it and saw the passesger, Morgan told his son:

"That's the guy."

They turned and followed a block behind and then Morgan spotted an unmarked police car coming up from behind. He pulled over and let the car draw even, honked it to a halt and told a detective: "Get on that cab, that's the guy."

Unknown to Colebert and his passenger, the officers had been paying particular attention to taxi cabs. Their suspect was thought to be on foot after he had fled from a car he had stolen, abandoning a mother and baby daughter he had taken hostage five hours earlier.

Driving down Raynor, Colebert's passenger suddenly said there were police ahead.

"Where? I don't see any," Colebert replied.

But the cabbie did see the pistol his passenger then produced. And the passenger told him to drive around the police ahead.

It was now 4:40 p.m. at the intersection of Raynor and Craigflower. And the police weren't just ahead. They were behind in cars and converging

The vote by Parliament probably will influence many Britons to vote for continued membership in the Market when they make the final decision in a referendum expected to be held June 5.

Tax Cut Likely In Turner Budget

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner Tuesday promised a new budget at the earliest possible date to cope with the most serious economic problems Canada has faced in 15 years.

Turner indicated the budget will be brought down before the end of May, and observers automatically assumed it will contain tax reductions to stimulate consumer spending.

Key factors that will shape the budget contents were described by Turner as:

—U.S. tax and energy policy.

—Any agreement arising from the federal-provincial conference on oil and gas prices.

—The possible effect the government will have on prices and incomes through its consensus program; and —A further assessment of the international situation.

It is two months since Turner touched off speculation on a new budget by admitting that the recession in the U.S. and Canada, and in some other countries, was having a deeper effect on the Canadian economy than had been anticipated at the time of the November budget.

Since then unemployment has worsened, statistics have shown that economic growth in Canada is in decline, and Canada's inflation has continued to run at the double-digit level while U.S. price increases have tapered off.

Perhaps the final straw in Turner's decision-making came yesterday when Statistics Canada reported that unemployment had increased in March to a seasonally adjusted rate of 7.2 per cent, up .5 from the previous month.

When he brought down his November budget Turner forecast a growth rate of about four per cent, in real

NO HARBOR RUSH

A year ago today the three-acre Reid Centre site on wharf street was frozen by cabinet order-in-council, and the following month it was purchased by the provincial government.

Last week the province added nearly nine more acres to its Inner Harbor land holdings — and became the major owner of prime waterfront in the capital — when it acquired the Marathon Realty property below Belleville Street.

As Times City all reporter Paul Moss notes in a Page 5 article today, the year separating these two events has been one of little or no visible progress, in terms of planning the harbor's future.

But that's a misleading impression, according to Resources Minister Robert Williams, who has apparently emerged as the No. 1 man in shaping our waterfront destiny.

Williams said Tuesday much preliminary technical work, including market research, has taken place since July last year, when the government's Inner Harbor consultant Rod Clack handed in his report following a well-attended public hearing.

A considerable amount of design work has also been undertaken by the government and by noted architect Arthur Erickson, the minister said.

"It's not something we want to rush into," he added. "A lot has been done in the background even if it doesn't look like it."

Williams said John Webster, who has been working in the lands department since the beginning of this year, was hired from Marathon Realty to co-ordinate all planning and development activities for the government's Inner Harbor holdings.

Asked if any legislation was in the offing with regard to harbor protection and development — as he indicated last summer — he replied that was more appropriately a matter for "other departments."

The minister wouldn't be more specific. "I don't know where it (legislation) stands in government priorities right now," he said. "It has been considered."

CUPE Hits Lum Charge

Saanich employees' union today denied responsibility for jamming sewers as charged Tuesday by Mayor Ed Lum.

"I deny it is being done by CUPE members," said Jim Brett, president of Local 374, Canadian Union of Public Employees. "I deny all charges by Mayor Lum."

Brett offered an explanation for the incidents, which have caused sewage backups and damage to homes in the Gordon Head area, but Lum said the reasoning was unsatisfactory.

According to one of the members of Local 374, whose normal work is in sewers, a former contractor employed by Saanich made a practice of putting chicken wire cages in sewer lines to catch foreign material during construction to prevent it from plugging the system.

Some of these, left in the pipes, could break loose and be carried downstream to lodge in strategic points, with the result that blockage could back up sewage into homes, Brett said.

But Lum pointed out the traps or cages have the appearance of being jammed into pipes with large rocks or sacks of stones on either side. One rock was nearly the size of the pipe itself, he said.

The mayor acknowledged the wire traps could have

NEWS BRIEFS

Deeper Recession?

WASHINGTON (WP) — Former U.S. federal reserve board governor Andrew F. Brimmer Tuesday predicted that the recession would deepen beyond administration expectations, and called on the federal reserve to push the nation's banks into a more liberal lending policy.

Brimmer said that the deteriorating economic situation would result in average rate of unemployment at 9.3 per cent this year, 8.9 per cent in 1976, and 7.3 per cent in 1977. (The March unemployment level was 8.7 per cent.)

Portugal Bars U.S.

LISBON (UPI) — Portugal's leftwing government has barred the United States from using an American base in the Azores Islands to supply Israel during any new Middle East war. But Prime Minister Vasco Goncalves has promised to honor all of Portugal's past commitments to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

8 Leftists Hanged

SEOUL (UPI) — The South Korean government hanged eight leftists today on charges of orgainizing student demonstrations to overthrow President Park Chung-Hee. The justice ministry said the condemned men — alleged members of a leftist organization called the People's Revolution Party — were hanged this morning at Seoul Prison. Six officials witnessed the executions.

Oil Transfer Talks

IDI FOR QUEEN?

KAMPALA (UPI) — President Idi Amin today offered himself as head of the British commonwealth in place of Queen Elizabeth because of what he called Britain's economic collapse.

Uganda Radio quoted Amin as saying, "The British Empire doesn't exist, and the British economy has collapsed which has made Britain unable to maintain its position as leader of the Commonwealth.

"I offer myself to be appointed head of the commonwealth in view of the success of my own economic revolution in Uganda."

The offer to succeed the queen was made in a telegram to commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith. Amin said that he would not attend the forthcoming commonwealth prime ministers conference in Jamaica but offered to host the 1977 meeting.

The commonwealth secretariat in London said it had received the telegram.

Posties Mull $68 Offer

OTTAWA (CP) — Letter Carriers' Union president Roger Decarie said today union leaders are still studying a conciliation report that proposes weekly raises to letter carriers totalling $68 over two years and, for now, have no intention of calling a strike.

The report was given last Monday to the union and government negotiators, but was not released until today. Should the union reject its proposals, a strike is legally possible April 14.

Pay raises proposed in the report, which was supported by the union nominee to the three-man conciliation board, would raise the weekly pay to letter carriers with three years' experience to $245.60 by July 1, 1976, from the current $177.60.

The conciliation report proposes a pay raise retroactive to Jan. 1 of 70 cents an hour; another 30 cents on July 1; a further 40 cents next Jan. 1 and a final increase of 30 cents on July 1, 1976. Letter carriers with three years' experience now get $4.44 hourly.

Total pay increases would be 38 per cent over two years, of which 15¾ per cent is immediately effective and dates back to Jan. 1.

PM, Premiers Join Battle On Future Energy Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — Eastern premiers opposed to higher oil and gas prices dug in their heels in determined style today as Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial leaders joined battle over future pricing policies at a national conference on energy and the economy.

If anything, attitudes appeared even tougher than advance publicity had indicated as Ontario Premier William Davis shifted his stand to opposing "any" increase from earlier resistance to a "substantial" increase.

"We will not support an increase at this time," he said, in determined tones. There was no applause from Trudeau and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed who both favor increases in the price of oil and gas, nor from Saskatchewan, which wants oil prices to rise higher than the current $6.50 a barrel.

Within a few minutes of the Davis statement, the Ontario premier was getting the kind of support he wanted from both premiers Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia, and more moderately, Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick, both opposed to any higher prices.

"We are not prepared to support further rip-offs by producing provinces and the government of Canada," Regan said to beaming approval by Premier Davis and a wry smile by Premier Lougheed.

Lougheed said the most important question facing the conference is the adequacy of a long-term energy supply for Canada and the prices necessary to achieve that goal.

In an opening statement Lougheed noted that Alberta had warned last year that unless incentives for oil exploration and development were improved there was a serious danger of a future shortage of oil.

The Alberta premier said the danger was dramatically confirmed in a National Energy Board report last November which indicated that starting in 1975 Canada's declining productive capacity would no longer be sufficient to supply it's total oil requirements.

The prospects of a future shortage in natural gas were also increasingly evident, he said.

B.C.'s Premier Dave Barrett suggested today the price for natural gas exported to the United States should double to $2 a thousand cubic feet by Nov. 1.

Reiterating his complaints that Canadian gas is underpriced in the U.S. market, the premier proposed three increases in the price from the current $1 level.

It should go to $1.40 a thousand cubic feet May 1, $1.60 on Aug. 1 and to $2 by Nov. 1, the premier told the meeting.

If approved, the increase would add $1 billion to the annual gas bill for the United States, which now imports about one trillion cubic feet of gas from Canada each year.

Premier Barrett said American producers already are selling intra-state gas, supplies produced and consumed within the borders of a single state — for between $1.50 and $2 for 1,000 cubic feet.

"British Columbia should be charging a minimum of $2 for its gas," the premier said.

Prime Minister Trudeau called for restraint by business and labor to fight inflation but said the price of oil and natural gas should go up.

He steered clear of saying exactly how much the federal government believes should be added to the frozen price of petroleum products.

Much of his speech dealt with the economy and the federal government's efforts to reach a consensus with industry and labor on how best to battle the problems of inflation.

Political Row Flares at Oscar Show

Times News Services

LOS ANGELES — The Academy awards Tuesday night were again used as a platform for a political statement.

Burt Schneider, co-producer of the winning feature documentary, Hearts and Minds, a film about the Vietnam war, read a telegram he said was from the chief Viet Cong representative in Paris, Dinh Da Thi.

Schneider said the telegram offered "greetings of friendship to all the American people" and asked him to "transmit to all our friends in America our recognition of all that they have done on behalf of peace . . ."

Later in the show master of ceremonies Frank Sinatra said he had been asked to make a statement on behalf of the Motion Picture Academy, saying: "We are not responsible for any political statements made on this program, and we're sorry they had to take place this evening."

Master of ceremonies Bob Hope said he received five telegrams from television viewers upset by Schneider's remarks.

Hope then approached Sinatra, read the disclaimer.

With the agreement of Academy director Walter Mirisch, Hope scrawled out a message on the back of one of his telegrams reading: "We are not responsible for any political references on this program and we are sorry they had to take place this evening."

Winners of the Victoria Times - CJVI 900 "Visit to the Hollywood Stars" contest will be announced in tomorrow's Times. For list of awards see Page 3.

Hope said that when Sinatra balked at reading the message in the name of the Academy, he told him: "If you don't read it, I will."

Sinatra then agreed to do it, but Sinatra's action brought an angry riposte from Shirley MacLaine, the only woman master of ceremonies.

She said she told Sinatra: "Why did you do that? You said you are speaking on behalf of the Academy, and I'm a member of the Academy."

Asked if she agreed with Schneider reading the telegram, Miss MacLaine said: "It seemed like a very positive, friendly telegram to me."

Miss MacLaine's brother, Warren Beatty, who had just presented the best movie award, also chided Sinatra, calling him: "You old Republican, you."

Participants said the incident climaxed with Miss MacLaine and Sintra still angry with each other as they were supposed to go into a song and dance number, That's Entertainment, with Hope and Sammy Davis to end the show.

Sinatra had to be dragged into the number by Davis tugging at his coat sleeve, they said.
